92.1 · Discourse Referentials · Speaker

I too, I indeed = καὶ + ἐγώ; a reference to the speaker, with an added feature of emphasis in the form ἐγώ The terminology ‘first, second, and third persons’ reflects the normal order in Greek in which the so-called first person always occurred first in any listing of participants. The second person would be in the second position, and similarly, the third person would be in a third relative position. To preserve that order in English, however, could imply impoliteness, and it is for that reason that it is preferable to translate JHN 10:30 as ‘the Father and I are one.’

53.28 · Religious Activities · Purify, Cleanse to cleanse, to purify to cleanse from ritual contamination or impurity The set of terms having the stem καθαρ appears to focus upon the elimination of ritual impurities. From an anthropological standpoint, this means the elimination of ritual contamination, or, in other words, negative taboo. This series of terms with the stem καθαρ appears to contrast with ἀγνίζω[a] and ἀγνισμός[a], ἁγιασμός[b], and ἅγιος[b] (53.44, 53.45, 53.46) focus upon a positive state of consecration and dedication to God and may be regarded as reflecting the acquisition of so-called positive taboo, that is to say, a state of holiness.

In ACT 10:15 the cleansing obviously involves not physical cleansing, but ritual cleansing, that is to say, the elimination of so-called negative taboo or ritual defilement.

ἐκαθαρίσθη αὐτοῦ ἡ λέπρα ‘his leprosy was cleansed’ MAT 8:3: The cleansing or healing of leprosy involved religious, physiological, and sociological implications. Since leprosy was regarded as a defilement and hence made a person ritually unacceptable, it also meant excommunication from normal social life. The removal of leprosy was regarded as an important religious matter, and the healing had to be verified by the priests before an individual was regarded as ritually cleansed. In a number of languages, however, it is quite impossible to speak of ‘cleansing a leper,’ for this would mean only ‘giving a bath to a leper.’ Accordingly, it may be essential to say ‘to heal a leper’ or ‘to cure a leper’ or even ‘to make a person’s leprosy disappear.’ In such instances it is usually essential to have some kind of marginal note or glossary explanation so as to indicate the religious implications of leprosy and the resulting ritual defilement.

to heal and make ritually pure, to heal and to make ritually acceptable to heal a person of a disease which has caused ceremonial uncleanness Since καθαρίζω[c] implies two changes of state, (1) the healing of a disease and (2) the making of a person ritually pure or acceptable, it may be necessary in some languages, and particularly in certain contexts, to render καθαρίζω[c] in a relatively explicit manner, namely, ‘to heal and to make ritually acceptable’ or ‘... ceremonially clean.’

to be dead, to have died (figurative extension of meaning of καθεύδω[a] ‘to sleep,’ 23.66) to sleep, as a euphemistic expression for the state of being dead Some translators have attempted to preserve the figure of speech in καθεύδω[b] and κοιμάομαι[b] by translating to sleep rather than to have died or to be dead. Such a practice, however, has resulted in misunderstanding in a number of instances and has sometimes led to the doctrine of so-called soul-sleep.

78.53 · Degree · Up To, As Much As, To the Degree That [Marked Extent of Degree] to the degree that, just as in accordance with a degree as specified by the context There may be a number of problems of restructuring in rendering the relationship between clauses marked by καθό[b], καθώς[a], and καθότι[b]. For example, in the case of 1PE 4:13 it may be necessary to translate ‘how much you share Christ’s sufferings is how much you can rejoice.’

27.7 · Learn · Learn to learn about, to perceive clearly to acquire definite information, and with focus upon the process of perception

ROM 1:20¹

¹ ROM 1:20 Some persons might insist that καθοράω refers primarily to the sensory act of perception, but since the qualities spoken of in ROM 1:20 are invisible, obviously the perception is a mental one and not a sensory one. Furthermore, the process of learning about these invisible qualities must be distinguished from the process of understanding, which is introduced in ROM 1:20 by a form of the verb νοέω (see 32.2).

¹ MAT 8:33 In MAT 8:33 the phrase καὶ τὰ τῶν δαίμονιζομένων is semantically a part of what was told. It is not, however, coordinate but dependent, in that it forms only a part of the entire account. From the standpoint of the people who announced what had happened, the focus was evidently upon the loss of the herd of pigs, and the healing of the demoniacs was an additional, less important factor. Accordingly, one must treat καί in this structure as being a marker of a non-coordinate relation.

latest, newest pertaining to a point of time preceding another point of time, with a relatively short interval and with the implication of something different

ACT 17:21

¹ Some persons see in the use of καινός in contrast with νέος a distinction based upon that which is novel and different in contrast with that which is young and recent. Though this distinction may be applicable to certain contexts and is more in accordance with classical usage, it is not possible to find in all occurrences of καινός and νέος this type of distinction. ² MRK 1:27 It is possible to treat καινός in MRK 1:27 as meaning ‘different’ and therefore related to Subdomain F Different Kind or Class in Domain 58 Nature, Class, Example. The phrase κατ’ ἐξουσίαν in MRK 1:27 may be related to the following statement about commanding unclean spirits.

καιρός (G2540)

noun, m. | -οῦ | ἀκαιρέομαι · ἀκαιρῶς · εὐκαιρέω · εὐκαιρία · εὐκαιρος · εὐκαιρῶς · Πρόσκαιρος

67.1 · Time · A Point of Time without Reference to Other Points of Time: Time, Occasion, Ever, Often time, occasion points of time consisting of occasions for particular events In a number of languages there is no general term for ‘time’ or ‘occasion.’ In some contexts it is simply not necessary to have such a term. For example, in rendering MAT 13:30 one may translate ‘when the harvest comes, I will say to the reapers’ or ‘when people begin to harvest, I will say to the reapers.’ In other contexts, a term which normally refers to some unit is employed in a generic sense, as in the case of Greek ὥρα which means literally ‘hour’ but is frequently used as a generic expression for a point of time, as in MAT 8:13. In ACT 7:17 χρόνος may often be rendered by a generic expression such as ‘day,’ for example, ‘when it was almost the day for God to keep his promise.’ In the case of MAT 26:45, the nearness of the time may be indicated as ‘very soon the Son of Man will be handed over.’ Though it seems quite ordinary in English for one to speak of ‘time coming’ or ‘... drawing near,’ this type of figurative usage is impossible in many languages. The equivalent may be simply ‘will soon be’ or ‘is about to happen.’ The expression οὐπω ἤκει ἡ ὥρα μου (literally ‘my time has not yet come’) in JHN 2:4 denotes that it is not yet the occasion for a particular event (see καιρός in JHN 7:8 and compare JHN 7:10) but that it will soon be. In these contexts the expression may be rendered as ‘there is still time’ or ‘I will soon do it.’ In JHN 7:30 and JHN 8:20 (οὐπω ἐληλύθει ἡ ὥρα αὐτοῦ ‘his time has not yet come’) the reference is to the occasion of his eventual arrest, implying that it will indeed happen.

14.63 · Physical Events and States · Burning

to burn, burning, to be on fire the process of burning In a number of languages important distinctions are made in the use of terms for burning. For example, the burning of a substance for light, as in the case of a lamp or candle, may be indicated by a term quite different from an expression indicating the destruction or burning up of something. Similarly, the burning of wood for cooking may require still another term. The extent or size of the fire involved may also require some distinctions in terms for burning.

14.65 · Physical Events and States · Burning

to ignite, to kindle, to set ablaze, to start a fire, to light a lamp to cause the process of burning to begin As already noted in the series of terms listed in 14.63, languages differ appreciably in terms employed for different phases and results of burning. For example, to set something on fire for the sake of providing warmth may be expressed by quite a different term from that which is used in speaking of the process of setting something on fire in order to destroy it.

In a number of languages one must not speak of ‘a lamp burning’ or ‘to burn a lamp,’ for this would imply burning up a lamp or destroying it. It may therefore be necessary to say ‘to cause the wick of a lamp to burn’ or ‘to light the wick of a lamp,’ and instead of saying ‘the lamp burns,’ one may say ‘the lamp gives light’ or ‘the lamp shows a flame.’

noun, f. | -ης | κάλαμος

3.58 · Plants · Non-Fruit Parts of Plants

straw, thatch the dry stalks of grain or reeds κάλαμος It is difficult in 1CO 3:12 to know precisely the distinction between χόρτον ‘grass’ and καλάμην ‘straw.’ It would seem clear that καλάμην would be less valuable than χόρτον, and this might be a reference to the use of straw as a very poor thatching material. On the other hand, it could be understood as a reference to the use of straw in place of grass in the making of sun- dried bricks.

3.19 · Plants · Plants That Are Not Trees

reed a tall straight grass or sedge; growing in or near rivers and marshes

MAT 11:7 · LUK 7:24

3.55 · Plants · Non-Fruit Parts of Plants

reed the stalk of a reed plant In some discussions of κάλαμος[b] the meaning is given as cane, but the term cane must not be confused with the meaning of walking stick. In MRK 15:19 it may be important in some languages to use a phrase such as heavy reed or strong reed, in order to avoid the impression that the instrument used in striking Jesus was some flimsy or fragile stalk of a plant.

measuring rod a rod (possibly a reed) used for measuring length There is no indication as to the particular length of κάλαμος[d], but it could have been as much as two meters (about seven feet), since this would not have been an unusual length for a reed. The equivalent of κάλαμος[d] may be simply 'a measuring stick' or 'a stick with which to count the distance.'

33.131 · Communication · Name to call, to name to use an attribution in speaking of a person It is not always possible to determine from the context whether the act involved is an initial naming of a person or simply calling a person by a particular name. Likewise in the case of attributions or titles, it is not always possible to determine whether it is a matter of giving an attribution or title to a person or simply a matter of speaking of or to a person by means of such an attribution or title. In some instances the giving of a title may be made indirect. For example, in MAT 1:23 the statement 'and they will call his name Emmanuel' suggests the giving of a title, but the process is stated in terms of how people will speak of this person.

33.312 · Communication · Call

to call, to call to a task to urgently invite someone to accept responsibilities for a particular task, implying a new relationship to the one who does the calling² It is rare that one can translate καλέω[d], κληῖσις[a], and προσκαλέω[b] as simply ‘to call’ in the sense of ‘to speak to someone at a distance and tell them to come.’ For example, in 2TH 2:14 it may be necessary to render the above clause as ‘through the good news we preached, which summoned you to do this.’ Similarly, in ACT 16:10 one may translate ‘because God has urgently invited us to preach the good news to the people there.’

camel large quadruped mammal; Camelus dromedarius and Camelus bactrianus; bactrians may reach 2 m.; dromedaries are bigger and a uniform light fawn color; bactrians are darker; suited to life in desert areas; store excess food in their humps, can go without water for long periods; can make long journeys through dry areas; used for riding and for carrying heavy loads and pulling carts; hair woven into cloth used for making tents or outer robes; milk used as food and drink; symbol of wealth and commerce In most areas where camels are not known, a term for ‘camel’ has been borrowed from a dominant language. In other instances people may have constructed descriptive phrases. For example, in Timorese the first two expressions suggested for camel were ‘the horse with a crooked back’ or ‘the long-legged horse,’ but finally people settled upon a more satisfactory rendering, namely, ‘the horse of the desert.’ In a number of languages a camel is simply called ‘the big humped animal.’ In a number of cases, however, it may be useful to have some kind of a description of a camel in a glossary or word list.

In referring to the camel’s hair garment worn by John the Baptist, there are two problems. In the first place, it is important to translate the phrase ‘garment of camel’s hair’ in such a way as to indicate that the garment was made of cloth woven out of camel’s hair and did not consist of the entire skin nor of camel’s hair stuck onto John the Baptist’s body. In the second place, it is important to indicate that this camel’s hair garment was a kind of rough garment, since in a number of languages an expression such as ‘camel’s hair coat’ would refer to an expensive, luxury garment. See also 6.216.

zealot, nationalist (the Aramaic equivalent of ζηλωτής[b] and not in any way related to the geographical terms Cana or Canaan): a member of a Jewish nationalistic group seeking independence from Rome It is possible that ζηλωτής in LUK 6:15 and Καναναῖος in MAT 10:4 function not so much as a designation of an individual belonging to the particular Jewish nationalistic party (according to some scholars such a party may not have been organized at that time), but of one who is simply zealous for national independence (see ζηλωτής[a] ‘enthusiast, zealous person,’ 25.77). Therefore, one might speak of Simon as ‘Simon the patriot’ (the same applies to ACT 1:13, the only other occurrence of ζηλωτής[b] in the NT). To render ζηλωτής[b] as ‘armed insurrectionist’ or ‘guerilla fighter’ (as some translators have suggested) would be reading into the text more than is specifically warranted.

heart, inner self, mind (a figurative extension of meaning of καρδία ‘heart,’ not occurring in the NT in its literal sense) the causative source of a person’s psychological life in its various aspects, but with special emphasis upon thoughts¹ It is often possible to render καρδία[a] by a number of different terms depending upon the immediate context, for example, ‘mind,’ ‘intention,’ ‘purpose,’ or ‘desire.’ In many languages it is quite impossible to use a term meaning ‘heart,’ since such a term may not lend itself to figurative extension in meaning. Often the equivalent of καρδία is ‘liver,’ while in a number of languages it is ‘stomach’ or ‘bowels.’

fruit any fruit part of plants, including grain as well as pulpy fruit A number of languages distinguish between different kinds of fruit. One common type of four-way distinction involves (1) nuts, (2) grain, (3) pulpy fruit surrounding a seed (the type of fruit primarily referred to in contexts containing καρπός[a]), and (4) fruit such as bananas, in which there is no noticeable seed. It is important in each instance to choose a term which will be applicable to the particular context.

¹ κατὰ[e] differs in meaning from μέσος[a], ἀνὰ μέσον[a], ἐντός[a], ἐν[b], μετά[h], εἰς[e], ἐπὶ[c], πρὸς[d], and παρά[b] (83.9) in that the focus of meaning is upon distribution rather than upon inclusion within any defined area or set. ² ACT 27:5 It is possible that κατὰ in ACT 27:5 refers to a position parallel with the coast and possibly involving a type of extension. ³ The difference in meaning between the set κατὰ[g], ἐπὶ[s], ἐν[s], ἐκ[k], and καθὼς[d] and the set πότε, ποτέ[b], ὁπότε, ὅτε[a], and ὅταν[b] (67.30) is largely a matter of class meanings, but there may be certain subtle rhetorical differences as well. ⁴ It would seem that the meanings of items in subdomains 70.1-70.4 (ὅλως[b], ὄντως, ἀληθής[b], ἀληθινός[a], ἀληθῶς, and idioms with ἀλήθεια) do reflect certain subtle differences, but it is not at all easy to determine precisely how they differ. ⁵ It is possible to interpret κατ' ἰδίαν as being primarily an element of setting, that is to say, without the presence of other persons, but in some contexts the focus seems to shift from setting to the fact that such events take place without the general knowledge of the public. Depending therefore upon the context, one may render κατ' ἰδίαν by such expressions as without others knowing or without other people being present.

to move down, to come down, to go down, to descend to move down, irrespective of the gradient In a number of languages there is a series of terms for going down or descending, depending upon the gradient and the rapidity with which someone or something descends. There may also be distinct terms depending upon the extent of the descent. Rain coming down would be regarded as an extensive descent, while getting out of a boat to walk on the water would be a very limited descent.

Movement downward may, of course, involve more than physical objects, for example, οὐκ ἔστιν αὕτη ἡ σοφία ἄνωθεν κατερχομένη ‘this is not the wisdom that comes down from above’ JAS 3:15. Since in JAS 3:15 ἄνωθεν is a substitute for God, it may be necessary to restructure this statement as ‘this wisdom does not come from God’ or ‘God is not the source of this wisdom.’

There is some doubt as to the precise extent to which βαπτίζω, καταβαπτίζω, and βαπτισμός in MRK 7:4 involve ritual cleansing, but the context would seem to imply this, particularly in view of the relationship of such washing to the rules followed by Jews in general and Pharisees in particular.

There are a number of textual problems involved in this expression in HEB 11:11, and many scholars have concluded that the reference is not to Sarah’s conceiving but to Abraham’s being able to become a father (see Today’s English Version).

MRK 2:15 · MRK 14:3

23.21 · Physiological Processes and States · Eat, Drink

to eat a meal to eat a meal, with possible reference to the fact of the people reclining to eat¹ In biblical times there were apparently three different positions involved in the eating of a meal. People might, for example, (1) be seated on cushions around a low table or (2) be seated on chairs around a table or (3) recline on couches facing a table. Meals which involved reclining on couches would normally have been more elaborate, but the verbs ἀνάκειμαι[b] and κατάκειμαι[c] have been generalized in meaning to denote the eating of a meal without necessarily specifying the particular reclining position of those who participated in the meal.

For the translator, it may be extremely awkward to speak of ‘reclining to eat,’ since this may have connotations of people who are too lazy to sit up at the table or who are too sick to partake of an ordinary meal. It is for that reason that instead of rendering ἀνάκειμαι[b] or κατάκειμαι[c] as ‘to recline to eat,’ translators use expressions such as ‘to sit down to eat’ or ‘to eat a meal.’

LUK 5:29 · LUK 7:37 · 1CO 8:10

¹ One would assume that ἀνάκειμαι[b] and κατάκειμαι[c] would have almost opposite meanings in view of the prefixes ἀνα and κατα. It is, of course, possible that ἀνάκειμαι[b] refers to being propped up on a couch where one was eating and κατάκειμαι[c] refers specifically to reclining, that is to say, lying down, but the contexts in which these two expressions occur do not provide a clear basis for such a distinction in meaning. In fact, the two are largely generalized to simply mean to eat a meal, though their etymological history may be significantly different. See also Domain 17, footnote 8.

καταλλαγή (G2643)

noun, f. | -ῆς | ἀλλάσσω

40.1 · Reconciliation, Forgiveness · Reconciliation to reconcile, to make things right with one another, reconciliation to reestablish proper friendly interpersonal relations after these have been disrupted or broken (the componential features of this series of meanings involve (1) disruption of friendly relations because of (2) presumed or real provocation (3) overt behavior designed to remove hostility, and (4) restoration of original friendly relations)¹ Because of the variety and complexity of the components involved in reconciliation, it is often necessary to use an entire phrase in order to communicate satisfactorily the meanings of the terms in this subdomain. In some languages, however, reconciliation is often spoken of in idiomatic terms, for example, ‘to cause to become friends again,’ ‘to cause to snap fingers again’ (a symbol of friendly interpersonal relations in many parts of Africa), ‘to cause to be one again,’ or ‘to take away the separation.’ A particularly crucial element in terms for reconciliation is the assigning of responsibility for original guilt in causing the estrangement. Some terms, for example, imply that the individual who initiates reconciliation is by doing so admitting his guilt in causing the estrangement. This, of course, provides a completely untenable meaning for reconciliation in speaking of God reconciling people to himself through Christ.

In a number of languages the contextual basis for an expression for reconciliation is often found in terms relating to the reconciliation of husbands and wives. Such expressions fit in well with many contexts in the Scriptures, especially in speaking of reconciliation of people to God, since God is frequently referred to as the husband and the believers as the wife.

ROM 5:11 · ROM 11:15 · 2CO 5:18 · 2CO 5:19

to gesture, to motion, to nod, to beckon to signal to someone by means of part of the body, especially by means of the head or hands¹ In a number of languages it is necessary to be quite specific with regard to types of gestures or motions of the head or hands and arms. For example, in JHN 13:24 there is an obvious question involved, and this may require in some languages a particular signal by means of the hands or face. The same would be true in the case of LUK 1:62. In LUK 1:22 the gesture would have to be something which would explain or indicate Zechariah's inability to speak, while in LUK 5:7 quite another gesture would no doubt be called for, since the persons involved were at quite a distance from one another.

καταπέτασμα

καταπέτασμα

καταπέτασμα (G2665)

noun, n. | -τος | πέτομαι

6.160 · Artifacts · Cloth, Leather, and Objects Made of Such Materials

drape, curtain, veil a hanging of cloth over an opening The καταπέτασμα of the Temple has been traditionally called in English a 'veil,' but a literal correspondence of 'veil' would be misleading, since it would suggest something which merely covers the face. At the same time a typical correspondence of 'curtain' could be misleading, since it would suggest something which covers a window. In some languages the most appropriate equivalent for καταπέτασμα in the context of MAT 27:51 is 'drape,' but frequently it is necessary to use some kind of descriptive equivalent, for example, 'a large piece of cloth hanging down from the ceiling' or 'a large piece of cloth covering the entrance.'

23.45 · Physiological Processes and States · Processes Involving the Mouth, Other Than Eating and Drinking to swallow to cause something to pass through the mouth and into the stomach The saying about ‘straining out a fly and swallowing a camel’ refers to gross unawareness of inconsistencies in one’s behavior, but in translating it is far better to preserve the intentional hyperbole, since it is one which can be readily grasped. As an aid to the reader, one can refer to the fact that in the list of unclean animals in LEV 11:0, the fly or gnat is the smallest and the camel is the largest.

καταχθόνιος

καταχθόνιος (G2709)

adjc. | -ον | χθόνιος (in/under the earth)

1.17 · Geographical Objects and Features · Regions Below the Surface of the Earth the world below, what is beneath the earth, under the earth pertaining to being below the surface of the earth In PHP 2:10 καταχθονίων is probably a reference to the dead, generally regarded as inhabiting a dark region under the ground.

PHP 2:10¹

¹ PHP 2:10 There are two basic problems involved in the translation of PHP 2:10. For example, the phrase ‘at the name of Jesus’ may mean ‘when the name of Jesus is proclaimed’ or ‘when the presence of Jesus is announced.’ The phrase ‘every knee’ means every person, since ‘knee’ is a figurative substitute for a person (see 9.16).

The fact that a change of state has taken place seems to be semantically incidental.

κατέρχομαι

κατέρχομαι

κατέρχομαι (G2718)

verb | aor. κατήλθον · inf. κατελθεῖν | ἔρχομαι

to move down, to come down, to go down, to descend to move down, irrespective of the gradient In a number of languages there is a series of terms for going down or descending, depending upon the gradient and the rapidity with which someone or something descends. There may also be distinct terms depending upon the extent of the descent. Rain coming down would be regarded as an extensive descent, while getting out of a boat to walk on the water would be a very limited descent.

Movement downward may, of course, involve more than physical objects, for example, οὐκ ἔστιν αὕτη ἡ σοφία ἤνωθεν κατερχομένη ‘this is not the wisdom that comes down from above’ JAS 3:15. Since in JAS 3:15 ἤνωθεν is a substitute for God, it may be necessary to restructure this statement as ‘this wisdom does not come from God’ or ‘God is not the source of this wisdom.’

verb | aor.opt.3sg. κατευθύναι · inf. κατευθύναι | εὖ + θύνω | εὐθύς

to guide, to direct, to lead to so influence others as to cause them to follow a recommended course of action In some languages it is difficult to distinguish readily between expressions for ‘leading’ and those which refer to ‘ruling’ or ‘governing,’ but it is important to try to distinguish clearly between these two different sets of interpersonal relations. In some languages, the concept of ‘leading’ can be expressed by ‘showing how to’ or ‘demonstrating how one ought to.’ In other languages it is possible to speak of ‘leading’ as simply ‘going ahead of,’ but too often such an expression may designate only ‘a scout’ who goes ahead to see whether things are safe, or it may refer only to a person who insists on his prerogative as the most distinguished person in a group.

κατηχέω

κατηχέω (G2727)

verb | ἡχέω

33.225 · Communication · Teach to instruct, to teach to teach in a systematic or detailed manner It is also possible to understand κατηχέω in LUK 1:4 as denoting merely what has been told rather than what has been taught (see κατηχέω[b], 33.190). This distinction is an important one since it implies a quite different relationship of Theophilus to the text of the Gospel of Luke. If LUK 1:4 pertains merely to Theophilus ‘being told’ something, then one might assume that Theophilus was not a Christian, in which case he may have been a government official to whom the joint publications (the Gospel of Luke and the Acts of the Apostles) would have been directed as a defense of Christianity.

On the other hand, if one understands κατηχέω in the sense of ‘to be taught’ or ‘to be instructed,’ then one would assume that Theophilus was a Christian who had been instructed in the faith. The relationship of Theophilus to the message would then determine in a number of contexts the difference between ‘we’ inclusive and ‘we’ exclusive.

καυσόω (G2741) — καυσόομαι

14.63 · (καυσόομαι) · Physical Events and States · Burning

to burn, burning, to be on fire the process of burning In a number of languages important distinctions are made in the use of terms for burning. For example, the burning of a substance for light, as in the case of a lamp or candle, may be indicated by a term quite different from an expression indicating the destruction or burning up of something. Similarly, the burning of wood for cooking may require still another term. The extent or size of the fire involved may also require some distinctions in terms for burning.

heat, scorching heat heat sufficiently intense to cause suffering or burning In some languages the effect of heat may be described simply as 'heat will not scorch them' or 'they will not suffer because of heat.' Such expressions, however, may be ambiguous because they might mean that the individuals involved would be able to easily withstand the heat. The meaning of the biblical passage, however, is that there would be no heat to cause them harm.

horn the hard bony outgrowth on the heads of certain animals Finding a term for ‘horn’ is usually not at all difficult. The problem arises when a term for ‘horn’ is already employed in a receptor language as a euphemistic expression for the male genital organ. It may therefore be necessary in REV 5:6 to speak of ‘a lamb with seven horns on his head.’

In speaking of the horn-shaped corners of the altar (REV 9:13), it is often better not to use a term meaning literally horn, since this might imply that the altar had the horns of animals stuck on to the corners. One can normally say ‘corners of the altar shaped like horns’ or ‘... looking like horns or projections on the corners of the altar.’ See 79.105.

It is this latter meaning which is obviously involved in MRK 6:25.

In rendering 1CO 11:4, πᾶς ἀνὴρ προσευχόμενος ἢ Προφητεύων κατὰ κεφαλῆς ἔχων 'any man who prays or prophesies with his head covered,' it may be important to indicate that the covering is not one which is designed to cover the entire head including the face, but only the top of the head. section, scroll section of a scroll or of a long composition Long compositions often involved several scrolls, and a κεφαλίς would form one section or scroll of such a composition.

In the case of practically all terms for documents (for example, ‘letter,’ ‘book,’ ‘scroll’) the meaning involves not only the object on which the writing was done, but also the contents of the writing. In some languages a distinction must be made between these two aspects of such objects, and one must make certain that the particular expression used in a receptor language will at least include the contents and not refer merely to the materials on which the words may have been written.

boat, ship, the ark a large box-like structure (the vessel built by Noah) The central meaning of κιβωτός is ‘box’ or ‘chest,’ but it was apparently applied to Noah’s ark in view of the type of construction and the fact that Noah’s ark resembled more a barge than a seagoing vessel. However, in view of the size of Noah’s ark, it is probably best in most languages to speak of it as a ‘ship.’

box, chest, coffer any box-like container, whether plain or elaborate; here, refers to the box used to hold the tablets of the Law In the NT κιβωτός[b] occurs only in the phrase κιβωτός τῆς διαθήκης ‘the box of the covenant,’ which was placed in the Holy of Holies of the Temple in Jerusalem and referred to also as being in the heavenly temple (REV 11:19).

In the case of English some persons object to speaking of the so-called ‘ark of the Covenant’ as ‘the Covenant Box,’ since they assume that the English word ‘ark’ has some special meaning equivalent to the corresponding Greek or Hebrew terms. However, the term ‘ark’ in Old English and Middle English is simply a borrowing of Latin arca meaning ‘box, chest, coffer.’ In present-day English the term ark is known primarily from the context of ‘Noah’s ark.’

In a number of languages it may be necessary to indicate clearly the kind of motion which would be implied in JHN 5:3. Perhaps the most satisfactory rendering would involve the kind of motion resulting from the bubbling up of water, but not with the implication of being caused by heat. lot a specially marked pebble, piece of pottery, or stick employed in making decisions based upon chance Both in form as well as in function, the closest equivalent of κληῆρος[a] is frequently a term which refers to dice. In LUK 23:34 a term for dice would be particularly appropriate.

It is not possible to know the particular method employed in ‘choosing by lot,’ for evidently various devices were used. In ACT 1:26 (ἔδωκαν κλήρους αὐτοῖς ‘they drew lots,’ literally ‘they gave them lots’), it is probable that small sticks were handed out. See also footnote under κληρόω.

to choose in accordance with the will of God (a figurative extension of meaning of κληρόω 'to be chosen by lot,' not occurring in the NT) to choose, with the implication of supernatural or divine intervention or guidance¹

¹ The phrases δίδωμι κλήρους in ACT 1:26 and βάλλω κλήρους in LUK 23:34 (βάλλω κληρον in MAT 27:35) refer to choosing someone by means of casting lots, but these expressions may be interpreted in a strictly literal sense and thus are not treated here as idioms (see 6.219).

κλησις

κλησις

κλησις (G2821)

noun, f. | -εως | καλέω

33.312 · Communication · Call

to call, to call to a task to urgently invite someone to accept responsibilities for a particular task, implying a new relationship to the one who does the calling. It is rare that one can translate καλέω[d], κλησιν[a], and προσκαλέω[b] as simply 'to call' in the sense of 'to speak to someone at a distance and tell them to come.' For example, in 2TH 2:14 it may be necessary to render the above clause as 'through the good news we preached, which summoned you to do this.' Similarly, in ACT 16:10 one may translate 'because God has urgently invited us to preach the good news to the people there.'

ROM 11:29 · EPH 1:18 · EPH 4:4 · PHP 3:14 · HEB 3:1 · 2PE 1:10

33.313 · Communication · Call

calling the state of having been called to a particular task and/or relation. As in the case of καλέω[d], κλησιν[a], and προσκαλέω[b] (33.312), it may be entirely impossible to use a term in a receptor language which means literally 'to call.' Therefore, it may be necessary to translate EPH 4:1 as 'I ask you then ... live worthy of the responsibility which God has urgently invited you to accept' or '... live worthy of the task which God has given you to do.'

1CO 1:26 · EPH 4:1 · 2TH 1:11 · 2TI 1:9 · HEB 3:1

87.2 · Status · Position, Rank

station, role the station in life or social role which one has. In this context, κλησιν refers to the status or role of being either a slave or a free person. In a number of languages this expression in 1CO 7:20 can be best translated as 'everyone should continue to be the same kind of person that he was when he was called.' Such an expression must, of course, refer to one's position in society and in the total social structure, not to particular aspects of moral or immoral behavior.

κλητός (G2822)

adjc. | -ής, -όν | καλέω

33.314 · Communication · Call

called pertaining to having been called. As in the case of the translation of meanings in 33.312 and 33.313, it may be necessary likewise to make certain semantic adjustments in the translation of κλητός[a]. For example, the phrase in ROM 1:1 may be rendered as 'urgently invited to be an apostle' or even 'summoned and commissioned to be an apostle.'

33.318 · Communication · Invite invited pertaining to having been invited. It is possible that this expression in MAT 22:14 was a common popular saying, namely, an adage. There are certain problems in the understanding of this adage in MAT 22:14, for it would seem as though many persons are invited to do something, but few are permitted to do it. Perhaps this should be understood in the sense of 'many are invited to apply, but few are selected.' In this context, of course, both the invitation and the selection would be by God.

region, territory, land, district (though this might imply too precisely a governmental area) region or regions of the earth, normally in relation to some ethnic group or geographical center, but not necessarily constituting a unit of governmental administration¹ The meanings of γῆ[d], χώρα[b], κλίμαθρον, and μέρος[c] are not to be regarded as completely synonymous, but in certain of their NT usages they are largely overlapping in reference.

ROM 15:23 · 2CO 11:10 · GAL 1:21

¹ The overlapping features of meaning in γῆ[d], χώρα[b], κλίμα, θρον, and μέρος[c] may be readily illustrated by the comparable overlapping of English terms such as region, territory, and land. For example, in the case of MAT 15:21 it would be possible to speak of the region of Tyre and Sidon, the territory of Tyre and Sidon, the land of Tyre and Sidon, and even the district of Tyre and Sidon. The English terms region, territory, land, and district do differ in certain nuances of meaning reflecting primarily supplementary components which are largely connotative.

heart, feelings, desires (figurative extension of meaning of κοιλία[a] ‘belly,’ 8.67) the psychological faculty of desire, intent, and feeling¹ Though some persons have attempted to distinguish between σπλάγχνον[b], κοιλία[c], and νεφρός, it is extremely doubtful whether this is really possible or practical. The semantic focus in the use of these terms is clearly the deeper and more intimate feelings and emotions. In some languages one can use a term which literally means ‘belly’ or ‘bowels,’ but more often than not, these emotions are associated with some particular organ of the body such as heart, spleen, liver, etc. Rather, however, than attempting to employ a figurative expression which may or may not be fully equivalent, it is often preferable to refer to the emotional content by using terms such as ‘feelings,’ ‘intent,’ ‘desires,’ or ‘compassion,’ depending upon the context.

LUK 11:27

¹ It would be possible to treat σπλάγχνα[b], κοιλία[c], and νεφρός in this figurative sense in Domain 25 Attitudes and Emotions, but these meanings have been assigned to this domain of Psychological Faculties since the meanings involve aspects of personality which function as agents or presumed locations of psychological dispositions.

In some languages it is necessary to translate κοινόω[a] or βεβηλόω as to take away its holiness or to make something unacceptable to God. In many cultures one must express this concept as involving so-called negative taboo.

to cause harm to (a figurative extension of meaning of κολαφίζω[a] ‘to beat with the fist,’ 19.7) to cause injury or weakness or possibly a circumstantial difficulty Though differences of interpretation exist concerning the meaning of ‘a thorn in my flesh’ (2CO 12:7), especially since some scholars have felt that this must refer to some kind of physical disability, it seems more likely to assume that it refers to some special personal circumstance such as the opposition Paul encountered in preaching the gospel, a reference suggested by 2CO 12:10 (see also 22.20).

Without some clear understanding of the reference of ‘a thorn in my flesh,’ it is difficult to determine precisely how κολαφίζω is to be interpreted in 2CO 12:7.

bosom, lap the region of the body extending from the breast to the legs, especially when a person is in a seated position The term κόλπος occurs in several idiomatic phrases in the NT. For example, the expression ‘who was in the bosom of the Father’ in JHN 1:18 denotes an association of intimacy and affection (see 34.18). In a context referring to the position of a person at a meal (as in JHN 13:23), κόλπος indicates an honored place (see 17.25). In LUK 16:22 κόλπος Ἀβραάμ signifies the heavenly abode (see 1.16).

Abraham's bosom, heaven (an idiom, literally: Abraham's bosom) the heavenly abode, with the implication of close interpersonal relations A literal rendering of κόλπος Ἀβραάμ as 'the bosom of Abraham' or 'the lap of Abraham' is often misleading. In some languages it may even suggest homosexuality, and in other cases it implies that Lazarus was either a baby or was changed into a baby in heaven. Since κόλπος Ἀβραάμ is generally interpreted as a reference to the eschatological heavenly feast,¹ one may be justified in rendering LUK 16:22 as in TEV 'the poor man died and was carried by the angels to sit beside Abraham at the feast in heaven.' In some languages κόλπος Ἀβραάμ in this context is translated as 'he was carried by the angels to Abraham's side' or '... to be with Abraham.'

LUK 16:22 · LUK 16:23

to be content, to be satisfied to be happy or content with what one has, with the implication of its being abundant Note that in this statement in 1CO 4:8 there is evidently a significant element of irony, and it is for that reason that some translations employ a question, for example, ‘do you already have everything you need?’ For another interpretation of κορέννυμι in 1CO 4:8, see 57.22.

to have enough, to be satiated to have enough, often with the implication of even more than enough This first statement in 1CO 4:8 is probably to be understood ironically, and therefore it may be readily translated as a question, for example, ‘do you already have everything you need?’ or as a statement referring to what the people of Corinth evidently presumed, for example, ‘you think you already have all you need.’ For another interpretation of κορέννυμι in 1CO 4:8, see 25.80.

κοσμοκράτωρ (G2888)

37.73 · Control, Rule · Rule, Govern

world ruler one who rules over the whole world The expression 'world ruler' should not be understood in terms of merely ruling over the earth as a physical object but of 'ruling over those who are on the earth.' Most scholars, however, interpret κοσμοκράτωρ in EPH 6:12 as meaning a supernatural power (see 12.44), though it is possible to understand κοσμοκράτωρ in this context as meaning a human ruler.

12.44 · Supernatural Beings and Powers · Supernatural Powers

power, authority, lordship, ruler, wicked force (title for supernatural forces and powers) a supernatural power having some particular role in controlling the destiny and activities of human beings Some scholars have believed that it is possible to reconstruct at least in part some of the hierarchy represented by these various supernatural forces and powers, on the basis of the neoplatonic system of nine such powers arranged in three orders of three each. NT terminology and usage does not, however, lend itself to such a classification, and it is difficult, if not impossible, to determine what are the significant differences between these supernatural powers and forces. In the case of EPH 1:21 some scholars apply the terms in question both to the supernatural and to the human sphere, thus emphasizing the totality of Christ's rule. This has a considerable measure of justification in view of the concepts held by persons in the ancient world, since various earthly powers were supposed to reflect corresponding supernatural powers.

For the most part, translators have endeavored to render the various terms in somewhat different ways, for example, ἐξουσία as 'authority'; δύναμις as 'power'; κυριότης as 'ruler'; and phrases such as τὰ πνευματικά τῆς πονηρίας ἐν τοῖς ἐπουρανίοις as 'wicked spiritual forces in the heavenly world.' In a number of languages, however, there are simply not enough terms to designate various kinds of powers, authorities, and forces which could be employed in speaking of such supernatural impersonal powers. Accordingly, some translators have simply used a phrase such as 'any and all kinds of supernatural powers.' Where it is possible to make certain lexical distinctions between terms and phrases, this, of course, should be done, but in a number of contexts this may be impossible, and accordingly, some explanation in a marginal note may be required if the reader is to understand satisfactorily the intent of the passages in question.

Collocation: αἰὼν τοῦ κόσμου τούτου

power, authority, lordship, ruler, wicked force title for supernatural forces and powers: a supernatural power having some particular role in controlling the destiny and activities of human beings Some scholars have believed that it is possible to reconstruct at least in part some of the hierarchy represented by these various supernatural forces and powers, on the basis of the neoplatonic system of nine such powers arranged in three orders of three each. NT terminology and usage does not, however, lend itself to such a classification, and it is difficult, if not impossible, to determine what are the significant differences between these supernatural powers and forces. For the most part, translators have endeavored to render the various terms in somewhat different ways, for example, ἐξουσία as ‘authority’; δύναμις as ‘power’; κυριότης as ‘ruler’; and phrases such as τὰ πνευματικά τῆς πονηρίας ἐν τοῖς ἐπουρανίοις as ‘wicked spiritual forces in the heavenly world.’ In a number of languages, however, there are simply not enough terms to designate various kinds of powers, authorities, and forces which could be employed in speaking of such supernatural impersonal powers. In some instances a measure of meaning may be obtained by somewhat paraphrastic expressions. For example, EPH 2:2 is rendered in some languages as ‘at that time you lived in the way in which the spirit that governs this world dictated you should live. This is the way the one who rules over the power in space commanded you to live. This is the very spirit that now commands the people who disobey God.’

¹ The occurrences of γῆ[a], οἰκουμένη[a], and κόσμος[b] relate specifically to the known inhabited areas of the earth, which in the NT period included the countries bordering on the Mediterranean, the Fertile Crescent as far as the Indus Valley, and as far north in Europe as England and Scandinavia. This was the total known earth or world. Such a restriction to a known area of the earth is also true of terms used in some receptor languages, though the referents are obviously different. What is important is not the particular area of the earth, but the corresponding concept of the surface of the earth as the place of human habitation. It is possible that οἰκουμένη[a] differs slightly in meaning from γῆ[a] and κόσμος[b] in view of a somewhat greater emphasis or focus upon the civilized part of earth. ² 1CO 6:2 · 1CO 6:2 It is possible to understand κόσμος in 1CO 6:2 as referring to all mankind, but in view of certain contrasts which are implied in this context, it seems more satisfactory to understand κόσμος in a more limited sense of ‘people of the world.’ ³ κόσμος[f] may be regarded as a highly generic term for any and all kinds of decorations and adornments; or it may be considered as the process whereby people may adorn themselves (see 79.12). κόσμος[f] is semantically complex, since it involves not only certain artifacts and the use of such artifacts, but also an abstract component of attractive appearance.

It is also possible that in all instances in which κράσπεδον is used in reference to Jesus’ clothing, the reference may be specifically to the tassels and not merely to the fringe or edge of the garment. The interpretation of such passages depends upon how strictly Jesus may have followed the Mosaic law and the manner in which the authors may have understood the meaning of κράσπεδον.

¹ κρίνω[ε], κρίσις[a], and κρίμα[a] often appear in contexts referring to the judgment of God, particularly in reference to the so-called end times, but the limited differences in semantic components of meaning in contexts referring to God’s judgment do not warrant setting up a separate set of meanings. ² One might argue that the meaning of κρίνω, κρίσις, and κρίμα in the cited contexts is only to make a judgment and that the negative or adverse character of the judgment depends entirely on the context. However, the frequency of the occurrence of κρίνω, κρίσις, and κρίμα in the specific sense of adverse judgment or verdict of guilt is such as to justify setting up two different meanings, one involving simply the process of rendering a legal judgment (56.20) and the other, the process of legal condemnation (56.30). ³ It is possible that πᾶγμα[c] is somewhat more generic in meaning than κριτήριον[b] or κρίμα[ε], but it is difficult to determine this from existing contexts.

28.69 · Know · Not Able To Be Known, Secret

secret, hidden, not able to be made known pertaining to not being able to be known, in view of the fact that it has been kept secret In a number of languages there may be complications involved in what could be regarded as a triple negation in the sense that 'nothing,' 'secret' (in the sense of 'not known'), and 'not be made known' are all semantic negations. It may therefore be better to render MAT 10:26 as 'everything that is now not known will be made known.'

In a number of languages 'secret' is regularly expressed as 'not known' or 'what is kept from being known.'

26.1 · Psychological Faculties

Collocation: ὁ ἐν τῷ κρυπτῷ (ἄνθρωπος)

the inner being, the inmost being, inwardly (idiom, literally: the hidden (person)) the psychological faculty, including intellectual, emotional, and spiritual aspects, in contrast with the purely physical aspects of human existence A strictly literal rendering of ἀλλ' ὁ ἐν τῷ κρυπτῷ Ἰουδαῖος might be misunderstood in ROM 2:29 to refer only to the fact of circumcision, which would be something which would normally not be evident.

In a number of languages it is quite impossible to speak of the psychological faculty of a person as being merely 'that which is within.' It is frequently necessary to refer to a particular organ of the body, for example, 'the heart' or 'the liver' or 'the spleen.' In some languages, however, one may refer to this faculty as being 'the person who stands inside' or 'the real person' or even 'the other person.'

In LUK 17:21 the phrase ἐντὸς ὑμῶν in the statement ἰδοὺ γὰρ ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ θεοῦ ἐντὸς ὑμῶν ἐστίν 'look, God's reign is within you' may constitute a reference to the same inner being designated by the phrases ὁ ἔσω and ὁ ἐν τῷ κρυπτῷ. On this basis some scholars have suggested that the phrase ἐντὸς ὑμῶν can be interpreted as a potentiality for participation and hence be translated ‘within your grasp,’ but it is more likely that one should understand the phrase ἐντὸς ὑμῶν in LUK 17:21 as a spacial relationship, for example, ‘in your midst’ or ‘among you’ (see 83.9).

to hide, to keep secret, to conceal to cause something not to be known¹ In a number of languages, the causative relationships involved in MAT 11:25 must be made somewhat more explicit, for example, ‘because you have kept the wise and learned people from knowing and have caused the unlearned to know.’ In MAT 11:25 νήπιος is used figuratively in reference to unlearned people.

crystal a very hard, translucent, and usually transparent type of quartz The equivalent of ‘crystal’ is often a descriptive phrase such as ‘a brilliant stone’ or ‘a shining stone’ or ‘a glass-like stone.’ In developing a satisfactory term for crystal, it is important to avoid possible confusion with diamond.

Some scholars, however, interpret κρύσταλλος in REV 4:6 as being a reference to ice (see 2.11).

REV 4:6

2.11 · Natural Substances · Water ice frozen water In both REV 4:6 and REV 22:1 (the only two passages in which κρύσταλλος occurs in the NT) the meaning may, however, be ‘rock crystal’ rather than ‘ice’ (see 2.46).

Though in the Arctic regions people may have a number of different terms for various kinds and forms of ice, there are many areas in the world in which there is no existing local term for ‘ice.’ Sometimes a descriptive phrase such as ‘hardened water’ is employed, and in a number of languages a term is simply borrowed from a dominant language of the region. However, in REV 4:6 and REV 22:1 it is possible to focus upon the brilliance of color rather than the particular substance and thus to speak of λαμπρὸς ὡς κρύσταλλος as ‘that which is sparkling white’ or ‘... bright white.’

23.63 · Physiological Processes and States · Sexual Relations

Collocation: σκεῦος κτάομαι

sexual life (an idiom, literally: to possess a vessel) a euphemistic manner of referring to sexual relations It is also possible to understand σκεῦος in 1TH 4:4 as one's wife (see 10.55). σκεῦος in 1TH 4:4 may also be understood as one's body, and therefore the phrase τὸ ἑαυτοῦ σκεῦος κτᾶσθαι may be rendered as 'to control his own body' (see 8.6).

1TH 4:4

beast of burden, riding animal, cattle a larger type of domesticated animal, primarily one used for riding or carrying loads In 1CO 15:39 (ἄλλη δὲ σὰρξ κτηνῶν, ἄλλη δὲ σὰρξ πτηνῶν, ἄλλη δὲ ἰχθύων ‘another is the flesh of animals, another the flesh of birds, and another the flesh of fish’) one might argue that κτηνῶν is simply a highly generic expression for all kinds of animals, but in view of its meaning in so many other contexts, it probably applies even in 1CO 15:39 to large domesticated animals.

As in so many instances, the translator must render passages in terms of expressions which are appropriate to particular contexts. For example, in ACT 23:24 a translation such as ‘horses’ would be appropriate, while in LUK 10:34 the term ‘donkey’ would be fitting, and in REV 18:13 κτήνη (in which κτῆνος contrasts with πρόβατα ‘sheep’) would perhaps best be translated as ‘cattle.’

universe, creation, what was made the universe as the product of God's activity in creation The meaning of κτίσις[c] might very well be treated as a simple derivative of the verb κτίζω 'to create' (42.35), since the reference is to the result of God's creative act. However, in a number of contexts, the process of creation is no longer focal, and what is in focus is the total physical universe. 12.9{N:001} · Supernatural Beings and Powers · Supernatural Beings

Lord, Ruler, One who commands (a title for God and for Christ) one who exercises supernatural authority over mankind (see also 37.51) The most common equivalent of ‘Lord’ is a term meaning ‘chief’ or ‘leader,’ but frequently this cannot be employed as a title for ‘God.’ One may, however, combine such an expression with a term for ‘God’ and employ a phrase meaning ‘God our leader’ or ‘God our chief.’ In some instances, however, a term for ‘Lord’ is related to a verb meaning ‘to command’ or ‘to order,’ and therefore ‘Lord’ is rendered as ‘the one who commands us’ and combined with ‘God’ may form a phrase such as ‘God, the one who commands us.’

κυριότης (G2963)

noun, f. | -ητος | κυριεύω

37.52 · Control, Rule · Rule, Govern

ruling power (derivative of κύριος[c] 'one who rules,' 37.51) a supernatural ruling power In general, the series of terms θρόνοι, κυριότητες, ἀρχαί, and ἐξουσίαι in COL 1:16 (as well as in EPH 1:21) are understood as being supernatural cosmic powers, whether angelic or demonic (see 12.44), but it is possible that these should be understood in terms of human rulers.

EPH 1:21 · COL 1:16 · 2PE 2:10 · JUD 1:8

power, authority, lordship, ruler, wicked force (title for supernatural forces and powers) a supernatural power having some particular role in controlling the destiny and activities of human beings Some scholars have believed that it is possible to reconstruct at least in part some of the hierarchy represented by these various supernatural forces and powers, on the basis of the neoplatonic system of nine such powers arranged in three orders of three each. NT terminology and usage does not, however, lend itself to such a classification, and it is difficult, if not impossible, to determine what are the significant differences between these supernatural powers and forces.

In the case of EPH 1:21 some scholars apply the terms in question both to the supernatural and to the human sphere, thus emphasizing the totality of Christ's rule. This has a considerable measure of justification in view of the concepts held by persons in the ancient world, since various earthly powers were supposed to reflect corresponding supernatural powers.

For the most part, translators have endeavored to render the various terms in somewhat different ways, for example, ἐξουσία as 'authority'; δύναμις as 'power'; κυριότης as 'ruler'; and phrases such as τὰ πνευματικὰ τῆς πονηρίας ἐν τοῖς ἐπουρανίοις as 'wicked spiritual forces in the heavenly world.' In a number of languages, however, there are simply not enough terms to designate various kinds of powers, authorities, and forces which could be employed in speaking of such supernatural impersonal powers. Accordingly, some translators have simply used a phrase such as 'any and all kinds of supernatural powers.' Where it is possible to make certain lexical distinctions between terms and phrases, this, of course, should be done, but in a number of contexts this may be impossible, and accordingly, some explanation in a marginal note may be required if the reader is to understand satisfactorily the intent of the passages in question.

76.18 · Power, Force to give force to, to validate to invest something with power or force In order to express the meaning of this phrase in GAL 3:15, it may be necessary in some languages to make more specific the arrangements involved, for example, ‘if people have signed an agreement, no one can disregard it’ or ‘if an agreement has been confirmed, no one can say it does not exist’ or, as in some languages, ‘if an agreement has been tied, no one can untie it.’

κύων (G2965)

noun, m. | κυνός · dat.pl. κυσί | κυνάριον

4.34 · Animals · Animals

dog relatively small light brown domestic animal, feeding on anything from household refuse to animal carcasses and excreta; Canis familiaris putiatini; associated with all sorts of uncleanness, aggression, greediness, low status In Greek outside the NT κύων may be either masculine or feminine and in the plural may refer to both male and female dogs.

MAT 7:6 · LUK 16:21 · 2PE 2:22

88.122 · Moral and Ethical Qualities and Related Behavior · Bad, Evil, Harmful, Damaging bad person, dog (a figurative extension of meaning of κύων[a] ‘dog,’ 4.34) a particularly bad person, perhaps specifically one who ridicules what is holy It is also possible that κύων in PHP 3:2 may be interpreted as meaning ‘pervert’ (see 88.282).

A term for ‘dog’ may have quite a different connotation than it does in English. For example, to call a person ‘a dog’ in some languages is to compliment him for his faithfulness, but in other languages it may be merely a way of attributing promiscuous sexual behavior.

88.282 · Moral and Ethical Qualities and Related Behavior · Sexual Misbehavior pervert (a figurative extension of meaning of κύων[a] ‘dog,’ 4.34) one who is a sexual pervert or possibly one who is sexually promiscuous It is also possible, however, that in REV 22:15 κύων means ‘a wicked person’ who might have complete contempt for what is holy, a meaning which parallels the significance of the adage in MAT 7:6 (see 88.122).

κῶλον

noun, n. | -ον

8.8 · Body, Body Parts, and Body Products · Body dead body, corpse the dead body of a person, especially one which is still unburied¹ Though in HEB 3:17 the Greek text reads literally ‘whose dead bodies fell in the wilderness,’ it would normally be a mistake to translate this clause literally, since it might suggest that the people died while they were still standing, and that only the corpses fell. A more natural equivalent is ‘they died in the wilderness’ or ‘they died and their bodies lay in the wilderness.’

¹ In earlier Greek κῶλον designated a limb, but in the NT it occurs only in the plural and means corpses.

¹ διακωλύω may be somewhat stronger in meaning than κωλύω, but this cannot be determined on the basis of existing contexts.

the people there, the people of a village the inhabitants of a village¹ Though in English it may seem perfectly appropriate to speak of ‘announcing the good news to a town’ or ‘... a village,’ in a number of languages this is simply not possible, for any announcement of good news must be directed to people and not to a place or area.

ACT 8:25

¹ It is possible that in the case of such meanings as τόπος[f] (11.59), πόλις[c] (11.61), κώμη[b] (11.62), and χώρα[e] (11.64) one should count on certain more or less automatic semantic rules by which the meaning of inhabitants could be derived by metonymy from expressions of place. Since, however, such metonymic developments are far from universal, the distinct meanings are listed here as a practical guide to translators. The same type of problem occurs with Ἱεροσόλυμα ‘Jerusalem,’ Ἰουδαία ‘Judea,’ and περίχωρος ‘region’ in MAT 3:5.

κῶνωψ (G2971)

4.48 · Animals · Insects gnat, mosquito small flying insect; feeds on human or animal blood; regarded as pest The straining of liquids referred to in MAT 23:24 is based on the regulations in Leviticus 11, in which the gnat is the smallest of the unclean creatures and the camel the largest.

For the only occurrence of κῶνωψ in the NT, one may use a term which refers to any small flying insect which might fall into a beverage and thus have to be strained out.
