33.253 · Communication · Speak Truth, Speak Falsehood

to lie, to tell falsehoods to communicate what is false, with the evident purpose of misleading The Greek term ψεύδομαι and the English equivalent ‘to lie’ involve more than simply telling what is not true, for this could occur without an intent to deceive or mislead. ψεύδομαι, therefore, involves not only the communication of a falsehood but also the intent to deceive.

It is also possible that such a person has pretended to have been present and thus an eyewitness of an event, but that is not the focus of the meaning. In fact, a false witness may have been present but at the same time may later provide false evidence as to what took place. It is possible to render ψευδόμαρτυς in some languages as ‘one who pretends to know about something but is really lying in what he says’ or ‘one who lies about what he pretends to have seen.’

verb | aor.opt.3sg. ψηλαφήσειεν · 3pl. -σειαν, -σαιεν, -σαισαν | ψώχω

24.76 · Sensory Events and States · Touch, Feel

to touch, to feel, to handle, to feel around for to touch by feeling and handling, implying movement over a surface There are a number of problems involved in the rendering of 1JN 1:1, for there are several radical shifts in figurative meaning. The specific reference is to ‘the Word of life’ which seems like a purposely ambiguous reference to Jesus Christ. The statement about ‘hearing the Word’ would seem to refer to a message, but the reference to ‘seeing’ implies some type of object. To emphasize the concrete nature of such an object (namely, the person of Christ), this statement about ‘touching’ is included, but in some languages a reference to ‘feeling and handling’ might imply quite a wrong connotation or even improper activity, particularly if the object involved is specifically a person.

to come to understand, to interpret, to figure out to come to understand the meaning of something by figuring it out The third person imperative form ψηφισάτω in REV 13:18 is extremely difficult to render in some languages, and even in English the expression ‘let him understand’ is quite misleading, since it might imply permission rather than polite command. In some languages the equivalent of this third person imperative is an expression such as ‘should understand’ or ‘ought to be able to understand.’ For another interpretation of ψηφίζω in REV 13:18, see 60.4.

pebble, small stone a small stone, possibly used for casting a vote or as a magical amulet A number of different suggestions have been made as to the reference of ψηφος in REV 2:17. Some scholars believe that the white ψηφος indicates a vote of acquittal in court. Others contend that it is simply a magical amulet; still others, a token of Roman hospitality; and finally, some have suggested that it may represent a ticket to the gladiatorial games, that is to say, to martyrdom. The context, however, suggests clearly that this is something to be prized and a type of reward for those who have ‘won the victory.’

MAT 15:27 · MRK 7:28

ψυχή

ψυχή

ψυχή (G5590)

noun, f. | -ῆς | ψύχομαι

26.4 · Psychological Faculties inner self, mind, thoughts, feelings, heart, being the essence of life in terms of thinking, willing, and feeling It is also possible to render ψυχή in PHP 1:27 as ‘purpose’ or ‘desire,’ for ψυχή focuses upon the total psychological being involved in struggling for the faith.

ψυχή[a] is often glossed as ‘heart’ or ‘desire.’ Compare the following: περίλυπός ἐστιν ἡ ψυχή μου ἕως θανάτου ‘my heart is sorrowful even to the point of death’ MAT 26:38; ἵνα μὴ κάμῃτε ταῖς ψυχαῖς ὑμῶν ἐκλυόμενοι ‘so do not let your hearts become discouraged and give up’ HEB 12:3 (for ψυχή in the idiom κάμνω τῇ ψυχῇ, see 25.291); ἀλλ ὡς δοῦλοι Χριστοῦ Ποιοῦντες τὸ θέλημα τοῦ θεοῦ ἐκ ψυχῆς ‘but with all your heart, do what God wants, as slaves of Christ’ EPH 6:6. In these passages, however, ψυχή refers really to the entire being of a person, so that MAT 26:38 may very well be rendered as ‘my sorrow is so great it almost kills me.’ HEB 12:3 may also be rendered as ‘so do not let yourselves be discouraged and give up,’ and EPH 6:6 may be appropriately rendered as ‘but with your whole being, do what God wants, as slaves of Christ.’

The meaning of ψυχή in the sense of the person as an individual is treated under ψυχή[c] (9.20) as, for example, in MAT 11:29 (εὐρήσετε ἀνάπαυσιν ταῖς ψυχαῖς ὑμῶν ‘you will find rest for yourselves’).

Even in those contexts in which ψυχή refers to existence beyond death, it may be referring figuratively to the person. For example, in ACT 2:27 (οὐκ ἐγκαταλείψεις τὴν ψυχὴν μου εἰς ᾗδην one may translate ‘you will not abandon my soul to Hades’ or ‘you will not abandon me to the grave.’

It is important to distinguish ψυχή[a], signifying a psychological faculty, from ψυχή[b], meaning ‘physical life, life principle’ (23.88). Note, for example, the occurrence of ψυχή[b] in HEB 4:12 (διϊκνούμενος ἄχρι μερισμοῦ ψυχῆς καὶ πνεύματος ‘it cuts all the way through to where physical life and spirit meet’). Note also the occurrence of ψυχή[b] in 1TH 5:23 αὐτὸς δὲ ὁ θεὸς τῆς εἰρήνης ἀγιάσαι ὑμᾶς ὁλοτελεῖς, καὶ ὁλόκληρον ὑμῶν τὸ πνεῦμα καὶ ἡ ψυχή καὶ τὸ σῶμα ἀμέμπτως ἐν τῇ παρουσίᾳ τοῦ κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ τηρηθεῖν ‘may the God who gives us peace make you holy in every way and keep your whole being - spirit, life, and body - free from all fault at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ’).

In certain contexts ψυχή would appear to be in contrast with καρδιά (26.3) and διάνοια (26.14) as, for example, in MAT 22:37 ἀγαπήσεις κύριον τὸν θεόν σου ἐν ὅλῳ τῇ καρδίᾳ σου καὶ ἐν ὅλῳ τῇ ψυχῇ σου καὶ ἐν ὅλῳ τῇ διανοίᾳ σου ‘you shall love the Lord your God with all your heart and soul and mind’). Because of the three terms, some have insisted that there must be at least three quite different parts of human personality. Others, however, have concluded that instead of being three parts of personality, these are only three different perspectives which one may employ in thinking about or describing human personality. Still others would contend that the use of the three terms, καρδιά, ψυχή and διάνοια, only emphasizes the totality of human personality, and no clear-cut distinctions can possibly be made. Certainly the referents involve considerable overlapping. One could translate with complete justification MAT 22:37 as ‘you shall love the Lord with all your heart and life and mind.’ In fact, in many languages it is impossible to distinguish between καρδιά, ψυχή, and διάνοια, and therefore it may be necessary to translate as ‘you shall love the Lord your God with all that you desire and with all that you think’ or ‘you must love the Lord your God with all your being.’

MAT 10:28 · MAT 10:28 · MAT 11:29 · MAT 12:18 · MAT 22:37 · MAT 26:38 · MRK 12:30 · MRK 14:34 · LUK 1:46 · LUK 10:27 · LUK 12:19 · LUK 12:19 · JHN 12:27 · ACT 2:27 · ACT 4:32 · ACT 14:22 · ACT 15:24 · 2CO 12:15 · EPH 6:6 · PHP 1:27 · COL 3:23 · 1TH 5:23 · HEB 4:12 · HEB 10:39 · HEB 12:3 · 1PE 2:11 · 1PE 2:25 · 3JN 1:2 · REV 6:9 · REV 18:14 · REV 20:4

23.88 · Physiological Processes and States · Live, Die

life the existence of a human being, or other living creature, sustained by the presence of air to breathe and food to eat In rendering ψυχή in ROM 11:3 it may be necessary to indicate more precisely the relationship between ‘to seek’ and ‘life,’ for example, ‘they seek to destroy my life’ or ‘they seek to cause me no longer to live.’

In a number of languages there is no noun-like word for ‘life.’ It may therefore be necessary to change all passages which speak of ‘life’ into a corresponding expression using a verb-like form meaning ‘to live.’

Collocation: τὴν ψυχὴν τίθημι to die voluntarily, to die willingly (an idiom, literally: to lay down one's life) to die, with the implication of voluntary or willing action Though in English the phrases 'to lay down one's life' or 'to give one's life' do suggest a voluntary dying, a literal rendering of such expressions in other languages would not necessarily imply the same. It may therefore be necessary to use such expressions as 'to die willingly' or 'to die without resisting.' In some languages 'willingly' is expressed primarily as a negation of objecting, for example, 'I will not object to dying.'

5.4 · Foods and Condiments · Food

a piece of bread, a bit of bread a small piece or bit of bread In JHN 13:26 it may be necessary to use a phrase such as ‘a broken-off piece of bread’; otherwise the inference might be that the ψωμίον was simply a scrap or crumb of bread. In some languages the appropriate equivalent of ψωμίον in this type of context is ‘a bite of bread.’
