MAT 18:22¹

60.77 · Number · Double, Four Times As Much, Etc. [Multiples]

seventy times seventy multiples of a quantity One should not, however, interpret ἑβδομηκοντάκις ἑπτὰ as referring to a specific number, such as 490, but simply an unusually large number with symbolic significance of being totally adequate or complete. For another interpretation of ἑβδομηκοντάκις in MAT 18:22, see 60.74.

¹ JUD 1:14 In the more general manner of counting an ordinal series, ἑβδομος in JUD 1:14 would really refer to the sixth descendant from Adam. In the Hebrew system of counting, Adam himself would be counted as part of the series, and hence the use in JUD 1:14 of ἑβδομος rather than ἕκτος.

15.75 · Linear Movement · Come Near, Approach to draw near, to come near, to approach to move nearer to a reference point In a number of languages it is not possible to merely say ‘to come near,’ for it is necessary to specify the reference point, in other words, ‘near to what?’ One may accordingly translate this expression in LUK 18:40 as ‘when he came near to Jesus, Jesus asked him.’

67.21 · Time · A Point of Time with Reference to Other Points of Time: Before, Long Ago, Now, At the Same Time, When, About, After

to approach, to come near, to approximate the occurrence of a point of time close to a subsequent point of time Though in many languages time may be expressed in terms of space, as in speaking of ‘time coming near,’ in other languages this may not be at all possible. Accordingly, this clause in MAT 21:34 may need to be translated as ‘it was about time to harvest’ or ‘when it was about time to gather the grapes.’

ἐγερσις

ἐγερσις

ἐγερσις (G1454)

noun, f. | -εως | ἐγείρω

23.93 · Physiological Processes and States · Live, Die

to come back to life, to live again, to be resurrected, resurrection to come back to life after having once died In a number of languages there is a difficulty involved in formulating some expression for ‘resurrection’ or ‘living again,’ since such a phrase may refer to what is technically known as metempsychosis, that is to say, the rebirth of the soul in another existence, a belief which is widely held in a number of areas of south Asia. This problem may be avoided in some languages by speaking of ‘his body will live again’ or ‘his body will come back to life’ or ‘he will be the same person when he lives again.’

pprs. | sg. ἐμοῦ (μου), ἐμοί (μοι), ἐμε(με) · pl. ἡμεῖς, ἡμῶν, ἡμῖν, ἡμᾶς

92.1 · ((sg)) · Discourse Referentials · Speaker

Collocation: ἐγώ · ἐμέ · ἐμοί · ἐμοῦ · με · μοι · μου

I, I indeed a reference to the speaker (with an added feature of emphasis in the form ἐγώ) The terminology ‘first, second, and third persons’ reflects the normal order in Greek in which the so-called first person always occurred first in any listing of participants. The second person would be in the second position, and similarly, the third person would be in a third relative position. To preserve that order in English, however, could imply impoliteness, and it is for that reason that it is preferable to translate JHN 10:30 as ‘the Father and I are one.’

ἐδαφίζω

ἐδαφίζω

ἐδαφίζω (G1474)

verb | fut. ἐδαφιώ | ἔδαφος

20.57 · Violence, Harm, Destroy, Kill · Destroy to raze, to tear down, to destroy (derivative of ἔδαφος ‘ground,’ 1.44) to destroy or tear down, by causing something to be brought down to the level of the ground In LUK 19:44 the pronoun σε ‘you’ refers to the city of Jerusalem.

LUK 19:44

20.64 · Violence, Harm, Destroy, Kill · Kill

to kill (a figurative extension of meaning of ἐδαφίζω[a] ‘to raze, to tear down,’ 20.57) to destroy or kill a population The verb ἐδαφίζω in relationship to the pronoun σε (referring to Jerusalem) means ‘to raze to the ground’ (see 20.57), but in reference to τὰ τέκνα σου ἐν σοί the meaning is ‘to kill.’ Accordingly, ἐδαφίζω must be regarded as having two different meanings within the same context: (1) ‘to raze to the ground’ and (2) ‘to kill.’

like a Gentile, as a heathen, similar to a pagan (derivative of ἔθνος ‘nation,’ 11.55) pertaining to being like or similar to one who is not a Jew In GAL 2:14 one cannot use some such expression as ‘like those who do not believe in God’ (compare τὰ ἔθνη, 11.37), since here the contrast is between two types of believers, Jews and non-Jews. Frequently there is no specific term for ‘Gentile’ in contrast with Jews, and therefore it may be important to speak of ‘Gentiles’ as ‘those who are not Jews.’ GAL 2:14 may then be rendered as ‘you are a Jew, but you have been living like those who are not Jews.’

nation, people the largest unit into which the people of the world are divided on the basis of their constituting a socio-political community In a number of languages a term meaning basically ‘tribe’ has been extended in meaning to identify ‘nations.’ In other instances different nations are spoken of simply as ‘different peoples.’ In certain cases distinct nations are classified primarily in terms of their diverse languages, for example, ‘those people who speak different languages.’ Such an expression should not, however, be used if it only refers to multilingual persons.

custom, habit a pattern of behavior more or less fixed by tradition and generally sanctioned by the society In a number of languages there is no noun for ‘custom’ or ‘habit,’ but the same meaning is communicated by verbal aspects or adverbial phrases indicating habitual action. For example, in the case of JHN 19:40 one may translate in some languages ‘as is the way in which Jews always bury people,’ and for 1CO 11:16 one may translate ‘this is not what we constantly do.’

since, because a marker of cause or reason on the basis that an actual case is regarded formally as a supposition In English it is possible to translate εἰ in passages such as ROM 6:8 and MAT 6:30 as either ‘if’ or ‘since,’ for the conjunction ‘if’ may also refer to an actual event as a supposition. In a number of languages, however, it is impossible to translate ‘if God so clothes the grass of the field,’ for this would imply serious doubt as to whether God actually does perform such an activity. It may therefore be necessary in such languages to translate quite specifically ‘because’ or ‘since.’

temple of an idol a temple or sanctuary which houses an idol The term εἰδωλεῖον may be rendered as 'the building in which an idol is placed' or 'a large house in which an idol is worshiped.' Since 'idol' is often rendered as 'the statue of a god,' εἰδωλεῖον may be rendered as 'the building in which there is a statue of a god' or 'a building in which a statue of a god is worshiped.'

¹ 1CO 8:10 It is possible that the statement about banqueting in the temple of an idol should be understood as a process by which a person would symbolically identify himself with the deity in question. This would accordingly provide a problem for an individual who was weak in his conscience.

sacrificial meat, meat of animals sacrificed to an idol the meat of animals which have been sacrificed to idols εἰδωλόθυτον is a semantically complex word meaning literally 'that which has been sacrificed to idols.' There is no specific element meaning ‘meat,’ but the stem meaning ‘sacrifice’ implies ‘meat.’ Part of the sacrifice was normally burned on the altar, part was eaten during a ritual meal in a temple, and part was sold in the public market. According to Jewish tradition this meat was unclean and therefore forbidden. εἰδωλόθυτον is normally translated by a phrase, for example, ‘meat which had been offered to idols’ or ‘meat of an animal which had been sacrificed to idols’ or ‘meat of animals killed in honor of false gods.’

6.97 · Artifacts · Images and Idols idol, (image) an object which resembles a person, animal, god, etc. and which is an object of worship¹ The technical distinction between an image and an idol is that an image may merely represent a supernatural being, while an idol not only represents such a being but is believed to possess certain inherent supernatural powers. Images often become idols when they are assumed to possess such powers in and of themselves rather than being mere representations of some supernatural entity. If, for example, various images of a particular supernatural being are supposed to have different healing powers, then what began merely as images or representations of a supernatural power have become idols, in that the different images themselves have acquired special efficacy. Though the existence of idols and corresponding terms for them are widespread, idols are by no means universal, and therefore it may be necessary in some languages to employ some type of descriptive equivalent, for example, ‘objects that are made to look like gods’ or ‘carved statues that are considered to be gods.’

It is also possible, however, to interpret εἶδωλον in 1JN 5:21 as being simply an idol.

likeness, image an object (not necessarily three-dimensional) which has been formed to resemble a person, god, animal, etc. In certain contexts the referents of εἰκόν[α], τύπος[β], and χάραγμα[β] may have special religious significance in that they may refer to idols, but the focal component for the translator is that of a likeness or resemblance (see 58.35). In contexts such as MAT 22:20 an equivalent translation may be simply ‘a picture,’ but in ROM 1:23 and ACT 7:43 one may use the same expression as is employed to render εἰδωλον[α] ‘idol’ (6.97).

58.35 · Nature, Class, Example · Same or Equivalent Kind or Class same form, likeness that which has the same form as something else Since the expressions τοῦ χοϊκοῦ and τοῦ ἐπουρανίου refer to individuals, it is much more satisfactory to translate 1CO 15:49 as ‘just as we have the likeness of the man made of earth, so we will have the likeness of the Man from heaven.’

In 1CO 15:49 εἰκόν designates similarity in class or kind, while in ROM 1:23 εἰκόν indicates a fashioned object (see 6.96).

33.131 · Communication · Name

to call, to name to use an attribution in speaking of a person It is not always possible to determine from the context whether the act involved is an initial naming of a person or simply calling a person by a particular name. Likewise in the case of attributions or titles, it is not always possible to determine whether it is a matter of giving an attribution or title to a person or simply a matter of speaking of or to a person by means of such an attribution or title. In some instances the giving of a title may be made indirect. For example, in MAT 1:23 the statement ‘and they will call his name Emmanuel’ suggests the giving of a title, but the process is stated in terms of how people will speak of this person.

89.48 · Relations · Result with the result that, so that as a result, to cause a marker of result, with the probable implication of a preceding process It is also possible to interpret εἰς in this construction of 2TH 1:5 as purpose (see εἰς[f], 89.57).

It would be possible to interpret εἰς ... ἄγω in ROM 2:4 as being purely an expression of cause since ἄγω[g] (see 36.1) also involves a component of cause, and therefore one may interpret the expression εἰς μετάνοιάν σε ἄγει as ‘it causes you to repent.’ In either case, however, εἰς marks a resulting event or state.

78.51 · Degree · Up To, As Much As, To the Degree That [Marked Extent of Degree] to the point of, to the extent of, to the degree that, up to a degree extending to a particular point as marked by the context In 2CO 10:15 περισσεῖαν itself indicates a superabundant degree of something (see 78.31), while εἰς marks a degree up to such a point. One may say, therefore, that semantically εἰς serves to reinforce the meaning of περισσεῖαν.

ACT 8:23

¹ In the meaning of extension toward a goal, εἰς[a] (84.16) and ἐπὶ[e] (84.17) overlap considerably. It is, of course, possible to argue that ἐπὶ implies being on or at a point, while εἰς defines entering into an area related to some point, but such a distinction would seem to be arbitrary. ² In contexts where an accompanying expression designates movement into an area, ἐν[a] and εἰς[d] may be rendered as ‘into,’ ³ There are no doubt certain subtle distinctions in the meanings of the terms in 83.9. For example, πρὸς[d] may suggest some kind of interaction or response and παρὰ[b] may focus upon association, but it is difficult, if not impossible, on the basis of existing contexts to define precisely the differences in meaning. ⁴ There are probably certain subtle distinctions between the use of διὰ[c] in contrast with εἰς[h] or ἐν[p] as markers of means, but this cannot be clearly determined from existing contexts.

εἰσδέχομαι

εἰσδέχομαι

εἰσδέχομαι (G1523)

verb | δέχομαι

34.53 · Association · Welcome, Receive to welcome, to receive, to accept, to have as a guest to accept the presence of a person with friendliness¹ In view of the fact that εἰσδέχομαι in 2CO 6:17 refers to God’s receiving people, it may be necessary to use quite a different expression than one would normally employ in referring to welcoming a guest into the home. In some instances one may use a rather generic expression such as ‘to accept,’ and this may be expressed idiomatically in some languages as ‘to extend my hand to you’ or ‘to count you as belonging to me.’ It is the figurative usage of εἰσδέχομαι in this type of context which may lead to a somewhat different type of rendering.

2CO 6:17

εἰσέρχομαι[a] is also used in the NT in speaking of the entrance of demons or Satan into animate beings, for example, λέγοντες, Πέμψον ἡμᾶς εἰς τοὺς χοίρους, ἵνα εἰς αὐτοὺς εἰσέλθωμεν saying, Send us into the swine so we may enter them MRK 5:12. In a number of languages one cannot speak of such supernatural beings ‘entering’ an object. It may be necessary to use such expressions as ‘to grab’ or ‘to control’ or ‘to command.’

¹ MAT 16:1 In MRK 8:11 (see 84.3) and MAT 16:1 (see 84.4) there is a clear overlap of reference between ἀπό[ς] and ἐκ[α]. ² No doubt the meanings in this series differ somewhat, but it is not possible on the basis of the contexts

now available to determine precisely what designative or associative features of meaning may be involved.³ The difference in meaning between the set κατά[g], ἐπί[s], ἐν[s], ἐκ[k], and καθώς[d] and the set πότε, ποτέ[b], ὁπότε, ὅτε[a], and ὅταν[b] (67.30) is largely a matter of class meanings, but there may be certain subtle rhetorical differences as well.

85.60 · Existence in Space · Remain, Stay to await, to wait for to remain in a place and/or state, with expectancy concerning a future event¹ This meaning is also found as a variant reading: ἐκδεχομένων τὴν τοῦ ὕδατος κίνησιν ‘waiting for the movement of the water’ JHN 5:3 (apparatus).

13.28 · Be, Become, Exist, Happen · State to remain until, to wait until to continue to remain in a state until an expected event

HEB 10:13

¹ LUK 18:7 It is difficult to determine whether ἐκδικησις in LUK 18:7 should be interpreted as a state of justice or the activity of giving justice. One might assume that the activity is represented by the verb ποιέω and that ἐκδικησις then denotes the resulting state, but it is also possible to understand ποιέω as a kind of empty verb, which simply marks a case relationship between the agent (ὁ θεός) and the primary activity in ἐκδικησις.

1TH 2:15²

39.45 · Hostility, Strife · Persecution

to persecute, to harass, persecution to systematically organize a program to oppress and harass people¹ In a number of languages the equivalent of ‘to persecute’ is simply ‘to cause to suffer,’ but persecution is also expressed in terms of ‘to be mean to’ or ‘to threaten’ or ‘to chase from place to place.’

For another interpretation of ἐκδιώκω in 1TH 2:15, see 15.159.

1TH 2:15²

¹ Some persons have contended that ἐκδιώκω[b] is an intensive of διώκω[c] with the resulting meaning of ‘to persecute harshly.’ However, general Greek usage and particularly NT contexts do not seem to bear out any such consistent distinctions in meaning. ² 1TH 2:15 In a parallel type of context, LUK 11:49 reads ἐξ αὐτῶν ἀποκτενοῦσιν καὶ διώξουσιν ‘they will kill some and persecute others,’ for which some manuscripts read ἐκδιώξουσιν in place of διώξουσιν.

ἐκκλησία

ἐκκλησία

ἐκκλησία (G1577)

noun, f. | -ας | καλέω

11.32 · Groups and Classes of Persons and Members of Such Groups and Classes · Socio-Religious congregation, church a congregation of Christians, implying interacting membership Though some persons have tried to see in the term ἐκκλησία a more or less literal meaning of ‘called-out ones,’ this type of etymologizing is not warranted either by the meaning of ἐκκλησία in NT times or even by its earlier usage. The term ἐκκλησία was in common usage for several hundred years before the Christian era and was used to refer to an assembly of persons constituted by well-defined membership. In general Greek usage it was normally a socio-political entity based upon citizenship in a city-state (see ἐκκλησία[c], 11.78) and in this sense is parallel to δῆμος (11.78). For the NT, however, it is important to understand the meaning of ἐκκλησία[a] as ‘an assembly of God’s people.’

In the rendering of ἐκκλησία[a] a translator must beware of using a term which refers primarily to a building rather than to a congregation of believers. In many contexts ἐκκλησία[a] may be readily rendered as ‘gathering of believers’ or ‘group of those who trust in Christ.’ Sometimes, as in 1CO 1:2, it is possible to translate ‘Paul writes to the believers in Christ who live in Corinth.’ Such a translation does, however, omit a significant element in the term ἐκκλησία[a], in that the sense of corporate unity is not specified.

assembly, gathering a group of citizens assembled for socio-political activities It is possible that in ἐκκλησία[c] there is somewhat more focus upon the people being together as a legal assembly, while in the case of δῆμος the emphasis is merely upon a meeting of citizens. But in the NT one cannot distinguish clearly between the meanings of these two words.

ἐκκλησία[c] and δῆμος may be rendered in some languages as ‘a meeting of the people who belonged to that place’ or ‘... who were inhabitants of that town’ or ‘... whose homes were in that town.’

advb. | παλαιόω

67.24 · Time · A Point of Time with Reference to Other Points of Time: Before, Long Ago, Now, At the Same Time, When, About, After long ago, of long ago pertaining to a point of time preceding another point of time, with an interval of considerable length¹ References to a point of time preceding another point of time may express a relationship to an event in the discourse or to the time of the discourse itself. In HEB 1:1 πάλαι[a] marks a point of time long before the actual writing of this Letter to the Hebrews. The same is true of ἐκΠαλαι in 2PE 3:5. In some languages it is necessary to indicate clearly whether the interval is (1) between a prior time and the event mentioned in the discourse or (2) between a prior time and the discourse itself. For example, in HEB 1:1 it may be necessary to translate 'long ago before now God spoke to our ancestors through the prophets' or 'long ago before now that I am writing ...'

16.19 · Non-Linear Movement

to stretch out, to extend, to reach out to cause an object to extend in space (for example, by becoming straight, unfolded, or uncoiled)¹

ROM 10:21

¹ With ἐκτείνω and ἐκπετάννυμι there is a type of movement in space, but only a movement of an extremity, not of the base from which the extension takes place. There is a sense in which the occurrence of hand with ἐκτείνω and ἐκπετάννυμι involves the motion of a body part (see Domain 18 Attachment), but since the same terms may be used not only of body parts but of any object which may be extended, it seems more satisfactory to classify all of these related meanings together.

ἐκπορεύομαι (G1607)

verb | πορεύομαι

15.40 · Linear Movement · Leave, Depart, Flee, Escape, Send to go out of, to depart out of, to leave from within to move out of an enclosed or well-defined two or three-dimensional area In some contexts one may interpret occurrences of ἐκπορεύομαι as being used figuratively or as part of an idiomatic phrase, but ἐκπορεύομαι also implies some type of movement out from a defined or enclosed area. Note, for example, the occurrences of ἐκπορεύομαι in the following contexts: τὸ ἐκπορευόμενον ἐκ τοῦ στόματος τοῦτο κοινοῖ τὸν ἄνθρωπον 'that which comes from a man's mouth causes him to be defiled' MAT 15:11; ἐξεπορεύετο ἡχος περὶ αὐτοῦ εἰς πάντα τόπον τῆς περιχώρου 'the report about him went out into all parts of the surrounding region' LUK 4:37; τὰ τε πνεύματα τὰ πονηρὰ ἐκπορεύεσθαι 'the evil spirits would go out of them' ACT 19:12. In a number of languages, however, it may be necessary to translate the meaning of ἐκπορεύομαι in quite different ways. For example, in MAT 15:11 it may be necessary to translate 'that which a man says causes him to be defiled,' and in LUK 4:37 it may be necessary to translate 'more and more people in all parts of the surrounding region heard about Jesus,' and for ACT 19:12 it may be necessary to say 'the evil spirits would no longer ride them' or '... control them.'

Collocation: εἰσπορεύομαι καὶ ἐκπορεύομαι

to live with, to live among (idiom, literally: to go in and to go out) to live or to conduct oneself in relationship to some community or group The semantic focus of these idioms, especially in ACT 1:21 and ACT 9:28, appears to be the manner in which a person conducts himself in relationship to others, but it is possible to imply a certain amount of movement. For example, in ACT 1:21 it is possible to translate 'during the whole time the Lord Jesus travelled about with us,' and in ACT 9:28 one could translate 'Paul stayed with them and went about in Jerusalem.'

25.217 · Attitudes and Emotions · Surprise, Astonish amazement, astonishment a state of intense amazement, to the point of being beside oneself with astonishment In many languages it is simply impossible to speak of ‘being beside oneself with astonishment’ or ‘having astonishment seize someone.’ Though such expressions may seem quite appropriate in English, literal renderings of such statements may be almost totally meaningless in other languages. In MRK 5:42, for example, one may readily translate ‘they were extremely astonished’ or in LUK 5:26, ‘they were all very much astonished.’

In a number of languages, of course, astonishment is expressed in an idiomatic manner, for example, ‘they had to look three times’ or ‘they looked but they couldn’t believe.’

¹ With ἐκτείνω and ἐκπετάννυμι there is a type of movement in space, but only a movement of an extremity, not of the base from which the extension takes place. There is a sense in which the occurrence of hand with ἐκτείνω and ἐκπετάννυμι involves the motion of a body part (see Domain 18 Attachment), but since the same terms may be used not only of body parts but of any object which may be extended, it seems more satisfactory to classify all of these related meanings together.ἐκτελέω

verb | τινάσσω (shake [something])

to shake off, to shake out, to shake from to shake something out or off, in order to get rid of an object or a substance In a number of languages quite different terms for shaking will be required for the contexts of ACT 28:5 and LUK 9:5, since in the first instance it is an animate being which clings, and in the second instance it is simply a substance that adheres.

In a number of languages, however, the symbolic meaning of ‘shaking dust off one’s feet’ is not at all clear, so that it may be necessary to add a type of classifier to indicate that such an action symbolizes the breaking off of association. It is for this reason that the expression ἐκτιναζάμενος τὰ ἱμάτια in ACT 18:6 is often translated as ‘he protested by shaking the dust from his clothes.’

¹ It is possible that ἐκτρέφω[a] is somewhat more emphatic in meaning than τρέφω[a], but this cannot be determined from existing contexts. ² There may very well be subtle differences of meaning in the series in 35.51, but there is no direct contextual evidence to support significant distinctions in meaning.

ἔκτρωμα (G1626)

noun, n. | -τος | τιτρώσκω (wound, hurt) · τραυματίζω

23.55 · Physiological Processes and States · Birth, Procreation

untimely birth an untimely or premature birth There is a certain fundamental problem involved in the rendering of ἔκτρωμα in 1CO 15:8. Here Paul refers to himself, but the event in question is the appearance of Jesus to Paul, evidently on the road to Damascus. The reference, therefore, would seem to be his being born as a Christian. This spiritual birth, however, would appear to be rather late in the process rather than premature. It is for this reason that it may be wise to translate ἔκτρωμα in some instances as ‘untimely birth’ or ‘born at the wrong time,’ rather than indicating that he was ‘born too soon.’

21.14 · Danger, Risk, Safe, Save · Become Safe, Free from Danger to escape, to avoid to become safe from danger by avoiding or escaping¹ The meaning of this part of ROM 2:3 is ‘to become free from the danger of being judged by God.’ ἵνα κατισχύσητε ἐκφυγεῖν ταῦτα πάντα τὰ μέλλοντα γίνεσθαι ‘in order that you may be able to escape all of these things that are going to happen’ LUK 21:36. In ROM 2:3 and LUK 21:36 ἐκφεύγω should not be understood in the literal sense of running away from (see 15.63). The meaning is simply not to become involved in such danger.

LUK 21:36 · ROM 2:3 · 2CO 11:33 · 1TH 5:3 · HEB 2:3 · HEB 12:25

A more appropriate expression in some languages is ‘a mountain known for its olive trees’ or ‘a mountain on which many olive trees grow.’ In a number of languages, however, it is important to employ a term such as ‘hill’ rather than ‘mountain,’ since the Mount of Olives near Jerusalem would be regarded in most receptor languages as a ‘hill’ not a ‘mountain.’

¹ Though the various terms for wine and olive oil might very well be treated simply in the category of Food (Domain 5), they obviously served other functions as well, for wine was used medicinally as an antiseptic and olive oil was used not only for food but also for illumination in lamps. ἐλαύνω (G1643)

verb | pf. ἐλήλακα | ἀπελαύνω

15.161 · Linear Movement · Drive Along, Carry Along to drive along, to carry along to cause an object to move by means of a strong force or vigorous action In LUK 8:29 ἐλαύνω occurs in the statement ἡλαύνετο ὑπὸ τοῦ δαιμονίου εἰς τὰς ἐρήμους ‘he was driven into the desert by the demon.’ In this context it would appear that the demon was regarded as a type of force, parallel perhaps to wind.

86.2 · Weight · Heavy, Light light, not heavy pertaining to being relatively light in weight Though in MAT 11:30 ἐλαφρός can be understood in a literal sense, the entire statement in this verse is, of course, figurative. Therefore, one can also interpret ἐλαφρός in MAT 11:30 as figurative (see 22.38). Note, however, that the phrase ὁ ... ζυγός μου does not refer to something which Christ carries but to something which he places upon his followers. The same is true of the phrase τὸ φορτίον μου ‘my burden,’ which is the burden he gives to his disciples or servants.

Gentile, non-Jew, Greek (an extended meaning of Ἑλλην[a] ‘Greek,’ 11.90) a person who is a Gentile in view of being a Greek Though the occurrence of Ἑλλην in JHN 7:35 could be interpreted as merely a reference to Greeks, it is probably a reference to Greeks as being Gentiles, and therefore Ἑλλην[b] is classified here in the subdomain of socio-religious groups. The occurrence of Ἑλλην in ACT 14:1 (ὥστε πιστεῦσαι Ἰουδαίων τε καὶ Ἑλλήνων πολὺ πλῆθος ‘so that a large number of Jews and Gentiles believed’) is another instance of Ἑλλην referring primarily to a socio-religious group rather than merely to Greeks as a nation.

ἐμβαίνω (G1684)

verb | aor. ἐνέβην · ptc. ἐμβάς · inf. ἐμβῆναι | βαίνω (go, walk)

15.95 · Linear Movement · Come/Go Into

to embark, to get into a boat to go into or onto, as in the case of a boat In certain contexts ἐμβαίνω[a] occurs without a specific indication of a ship or boat in the immediate context, for example, πάλιν ἐμβάς ἀπῆλθεν εἰς τὸ πέραν ‘again embarking, he left for the other side’ MRK 8:13.

In a number of languages it is necessary to introduce into the context some specific reference to a boat or ship.

ἐμβατεύω

ἐμβατεύω (G1687)

verb | βαίνω (go, walk)

53.15 · Religious Activities · Religious Practice

[Glosses - en] The meaning of ἐμβατεύω, which occurs only once in the NT, namely, in COL 2:18, is obscure. It may mean more or less literally ‘to set foot upon’ or ‘to enter’ or possibly ‘to come into possession of.’ It may also mean ‘to enter into’ in the sense of to go into detail in treating a subject, but it seems more likely that ἐμβατεύω in COL 2:18 is a technical term derived from the mystery religions, and it could be interpreted in the phrase ἃ ἐώρακεν ἐμβατεύων as meaning ‘who enters the sanctuary which he saw in ecstasy’ or ‘taking his stand on what he has seen in the mysteries.’ In view of the context, which speaks of someone being puffed up without cause, one might also render this Greek phrase as ‘by what he saw when he was initiated.’ For further data on this semantically difficult term, see A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament, University of Chicago Press, third edition edited by Danker (BDAG).

verb

23.44 · Physiological Processes and States · Processes Involving the Mouth, Other Than Eating and Drinking to vomit Since a term meaning ‘to vomit’ often carries somewhat vulgar connotations, ἐμέω in REV 3:16 has frequently been translated as ‘to spit out of my mouth.’

It is also possible to interpret ‘to vomit out of the mouth’ as an idiom meaning ‘to reject.’¹

REV 3:16

¹ Though it is possible to understand the expression vomit out of the mouth as being an idiom meaning to reject, it is probably better to assume that this expression (ἐμέω ἐκ τοῦ στόματος) is simply used figuratively rather than being a conventionalized idiom.

Collocation: ἐμπί(μ)πλαμαι · ἐμπιπλάομαι to enjoy to enjoy something fully and completely, with the implication of satisfying one's desires

ROM 15:24

23.17 · Physiological Processes and States · Eat, Drink

Collocation: ἐμπί(μ)πλημι · ἐμπιπλάω to satisfy with food, to fill with food (two different forms of the same base, compare 23.18) to cause someone to be satisfied as the result of food which has been provided in sufficient quantity It is possible that in LUK 1:53 the reference is to God's providence in general rather than merely to feeding the hungry.

A strictly literal rendering of ἐμπίμπλημι or ἐμπιπλάω in the sense of 'to fill with food' might carry the wrong implication, namely, 'to stuff with food' to the point of making someone extremely uncomfortable. It may therefore be important to divide somewhat the complex semantic components of meaning and to translate 'to cause to eat much and to become happy' or 'to cause to eat enough and as a result to be content.'

ἐμπίπρημι

ἐμπίπρημι

ἐμπίπρημι (G1714) — ἐμπίμπρημι

verb | aor. ἐνέπρησα | πίπρημι

14.65 · (ἐμπίμπρημι) · Physical Events and States · Burning to ignite, to kindle, to set ablaze, to start a fire, to light a lamp to cause the process of burning to begin As already noted in the series of terms listed in 14.63, languages differ appreciably in terms employed for different phases and results of burning. For example, to set something on fire for the sake of providing warmth may be expressed by quite a different term from that which is used in speaking of the process of setting something on fire in order to destroy it.

ἐμπίπρημι refers specifically to the process of setting something on fire, but obviously the implication in MAT 22:7 is that the city was burned down. A number of translations, therefore, follow the implied component of ἐμπίπρημι and translate 'he burned down their city.' In some languages it may seem strange to speak of 'burning down a city.' A more natural expression would be 'to burn down all the buildings of the city.'

to become involved (a figurative extension of meaning of ἐμπλέκομαι ‘to become entangled,’ not occurring in the NT) to become so involved in some activity as to experience severe restrictions as to what one can do

2TI 2:4¹ · 2PE 2:20

¹ 2TI 2:4 As in the case of πράσσω[d] (90.76 and footnote), ἐμπλέκομαι in 2TI 2:4 involves both action and experiencing. One may say, therefore, that ἐμπλέκομαι in such a context is semantically complex in that it really belongs to two different semantic domains. Here, however, the condition of the soldier seems to be more in focus than his activity, and for that reason ἐμπλέκομαι is classified in this subdomain.

ἐμπτύω (G1716)

verb | πτύω

23.43 · Physiological Processes and States · Processes Involving the Mouth, Other Than Eating and Drinking

to spit (on) to spit on or at something or someone¹ In some societies spitting has quite a different symbolic meaning than it has in the Western world. In fact, in some societies in Africa, to spit upon a person's head is to confer a blessing. It may therefore be necessary in the case of MAT 26:67 to translate 'they spat in his face' as 'they spat in his face to dishonor him' or '... to show their anger against him.'

MAT 26:67 · MAT 27:30 · MRK 10:34 · MRK 14:65 · MRK 15:19 · LUK 18:32

¹ It is possible that a distinction in meaning should be made between πτύω and ἐμπτύω, in which case the latter term would emphasize the spitting in or upon an object. However, there are insufficient contrasts in contexts to warrant making such a distinction.

¹ All of these meanings involve a shift from the sensory domain of seeing, causing to see, or giving light to, to the cognitive domain of making something fully known, evident, and clear. ² JHN 14:21 In JHN 14:21 it is difficult to know precisely the manner or extent of the revealing represented by the verb ἐμφανίζω. It would seem that cognitive awareness or knowledge about is far more likely than any physical or visual appearance. ³ ἀγγέλλω appears to be more generic in meaning than a term such as ἐμφανίζω[c] (33.208), but it is difficult to indicate in all instances the various aspects of denotation and connotation associated with the meanings in this subdomain.

adjc. | -ον | φοβέομαι

25.256 · Attitudes and Emotions · Fear, Terror, Alarm

very frightened, terrified, very much afraid pertaining to being extremely afraid¹

LUK 24:5 · LUK 24:37 · ACT 10:4 · ACT 24:25 · REV 11:13

¹ It is possible that ἐκφοβος and ἐμφοβος differ slightly in the intensity of fear, but this cannot be determined from existing contexts.

ἐμφυσάω

ἐμφυσάω (G1720)

verb | φυσάω (blow, puff)

23.185 · Physiological Processes and States · Breathe, Breath to breathe on to breathe upon something The process of breathing on someone may have very important symbolic implications. In some instances this can be related to a blessing, as in JHN 20:22, but in some languages the act of breathing on a person almost inevitably suggests some harmful influence, often connected with the use of black magic. It may therefore be important to select some less specific term so as to avoid a symbolic meaning which would considerably distort the significance of this one passage in which ἐμφυσάω occurs in the NT.

83.13 · Spacial Positions · Among, Between, In, Inside

inside, within, in a position defined as being within certain limits¹ Some translations render MRK 5:3 as ‘he lived among the graves,’ but it is likely that the Greek expression refers to living within relatively elaborate tombs. In MRK 2:8 it is also possible to understand the phrase έν έαυτοίς as meaning ‘among themselves’ (see έν[b], 83.9). It may not be possible in some languages to speak of a part of a document as being ‘in’ something. It may, therefore, be necessary to render this expression in 1CO 5:9 as ‘part of what I wrote to you about was ...’

on, at a position on the surface of an area In a number of languages it may be quite impossible to speak of ‘tablets of the human heart’ (2CO 3:3). An equivalent may be ‘in the human heart’ or ‘in people’s hearts.’ In some languages, however, it may be necessary to substitute ‘mind,’ for example, ‘in people’s minds.’

Such a translation would imply the relationship of authority, and the meaning could be classified in Domain 37 Control, Rule.

¹ In contexts where an accompanying expression designates movement into an area, ἐν[a] and εἰς[d] may be rendered as 'into.' ² There are no doubt certain subtle distinctions in the meanings of the terms in 83.9. For example, πρὸς[d] may suggest some kind of interaction or response and παρὰ[b] may focus upon association, but it is difficult, if not impossible, on the basis of existing contexts to define precisely the differences in meaning. ³ Attendant circumstances are often expressed in English by participial or gerund phrases. ⁴ Manner is expressed in a number of different ways in diverse languages. In English it is often expressed by means of a phrase introduced by with, but the appropriate equivalent in some contexts is simply an adverb. Often, however, an entire clause or additional complete sentence is required. ⁵ As will be noted in a number of instances of markers of experienter relations, there may be no lexical item in a translation which specifically corresponds to such a marker.⁶ There are probably certain subtle distinctions between the use of διὰ[c] in contrast with εἰς[h] or ἐν[p] as markers of means, but this cannot be clearly determined from existing contexts.⁷ The difference in meaning between the set κατὰ[g], ἐπὶ[s], ἐν[s], ἐκ[k], and καθὼς[d] and the set πότε, ποτέ[b], ὁπότε, ὅτε[a], and ὅταν[b] (67.30) is largely a matter of class meanings, but there may be certain subtle rhetorical differences as well.⁸ It would seem that the meanings of items 70.1-70.4 do reflect certain subtle differences, but it is not at all easy to determine precisely how they differ.⁹ The series of expressions indicating relative shortness of time may very well differ slightly, at least in connotative meaning, but on the basis of existing NT contexts it is not possible to determine significant denotative differences. The phrases in this series may be technically regarded as idioms, but functionally they are better classed as frozen phrases, which act essentially like morphological units.¹⁰ It is very possible that the two idioms in 28.64 differ somewhat in meaning, or at least in connotation, but it is difficult, if not impossible, to show this from existing contexts.¹¹ NEW NOTE en

ἐναντιόομαι

verb | ἐν + αντί

39.1 · Hostility, Strife · Opposition, Hostility

to oppose, to be hostile toward, to show hostility to oppose someone, involving not only a psychological attitude but also a corresponding behavior¹ This word is only found as a variant reading: ἐναντιούμενοι καὶ βλασφημοῦντες ‘they opposed him and insulted him’ ACT 13:45 (apparatus).

ACT 13:45

¹ There are probably certain significant distinctions in meaning in the various verbs listed in 39.1, but on the basis of NT usage it is not possible to determine precisely what these distinctions may be.

2TH 1:5

¹ As in the case of βέβαιος[c] (28.43), βέβαιον[b] (28.43), and βεβαίως (28.44), there are two distinct sets of semantic features in the series ἔνδειξις, ἔνδειγμα, and ἀπόδειξις. The element of showing or demonstrating implies clearly making something known, but that which is made known is done in a clear, convincing, and confirming manner and therefore shown to be certain or true. This double set of semantic features is contained in such terms as proof, evidence and confirmation.

7.77 · Constructions · Building Materials building material material used in the construction of buildings It is also possible to understand ἐνδώμησις in the sense of 'foundation' (see ἐνδώμησις[b], 7.41).

REV 21:18

7.41 · Constructions · Parts and Areas of Buildings foundation that on which a structure is built In some languages it is possible to describe a typical foundation in ancient times as 'large stones underneath the walls.' In other languages, however, this may seem to be quite a meaningless type of expression, since foundations are only made secure by driving stakes deep into the ground. Therefore, it may be best to describe the function of a foundation by 'what keeps the walls firm' or 'how the walls are made not to move' or 'what goes beneath the walls.'

A number of scholars, however, prefer to understand ἐνδώμησις in the context of REV 21:18 as the material of which the wall was made, rather than as the foundation of the wall (see ἐνδώμησις[a], 7.77).

verb | νεύω

33.485 · Communication · Non-Verbal Communication to gesture, to motion, to nod, to beckon to signal to someone by means of part of the body, especially by means of the head or hands¹ In a number of languages it is necessary to be quite specific with regard to types of gestures or motions of the head or hands and arms. For example, in JHN 13:24 there is an obvious question involved, and this may require in some languages a particular signal by means of the hands or face. The same would be true in the case of LUK 1:62. In LUK 1:22 the gesture would have to be something which would explain or indicate Zechariah's inability to speak, while in LUK 5:7 quite another gesture would no doubt be called for, since the persons involved were at quite a distance from one another.

LUK 1:62

¹ There are no doubt certain subtle differences of meaning between νεύω, ἐννεύω, διανεύω, and κατανεύω, but such distinctions are not evident from existing contexts.

ἔννοια

ἔννοια (G1771)

noun, f. | -ας | νοέω

30.5 · Think · To Think, Thought

way of thinking, disposition, manner of thought, attitude a particular manner or way of thinking In a number of languages it may be necessary to render ‘way of thinking’ by a clause, for example, ‘how people think.’ In the case of 1PE 4:1, it may be necessary to translate ‘you too must strengthen yourselves by thinking just like Christ thought.’

1PE 4:1

30.66 · Think · To Intend, To Purpose, To Plan

intention, purpose that which is intended or purposed as the result of thinking

HEB 4:12

ἔννομος

ἔννομος

ἔννομος (G1772)

adjc. | -ον | νόμος

33.336 · Communication · Law, Regulation, Ordinance

legal, in accordance with law (derivative of νόμος[a] ‘law, rule,’ 33.333) pertaining to being in accordance with law In some languages the equivalent of ‘legal meeting’ would be ‘regular meeting’ or ‘a meeting called by an official’ or ‘a meeting authorized by an official.’

ACT 19:39

33.342 · Communication · Law, Regulation, Ordinance

subject to law, under law pertaining to being under obligation imposed by law In some languages there is a difficulty involved in rendering ἔννομος by a phrase such as ‘under law,’ since this may be understood in a sense of ‘beneath the law’ or ‘illegal.’ A more common expression would be ‘tied to the law’ or ‘obligated by the law.’

85.73 · Existence in Space · Dwell, Reside

to be in, to live in, to dwell in, to reside in (a figurative extension of meaning of ἐνοικέω ‘to live in,’ not occurring in the NT) to remain in a place defined psychologically or spiritually

2CO 6:16 · COL 3:16 · 2TI 1:5 · 2TI 1:14

ἐνορκίζω

ἐνορκίζω

ἐνορκίζω (G3726a)

verb | ὀρκίζω

33.467 · Communication · Swear, Put Under Oath, Vow

to put under oath, to insist that one take an oath, to require that one swear to demand that a person take an oath as to the truth of what is said or as to the certainty that one will carry out the request or command¹ It is extremely difficult to translate ὀρκίζω, ἐνορκίζω, and ἐξορκίζω in a literal manner, though in some contexts one can say ‘I put you under oath,’ but in a number of passages the person speaking is imploring and not necessarily in a position to command or insist. Therefore, in a passage such as MRK 5:7, one may render the meaning idiomatically as ‘for God’s sake, I ask you, do not punish me.’ In 1TH 5:27 one may translate ‘in the name of the Lord, I ask you to read this letter to all the Christian brothers,’ and in MAT 26:63 one may translate ‘in the name of the living God, I charge you, Tell us who you are.’

In most languages one may translate ὀρκίζω, ἐνορκίζω, and ἐξορκίζω by simply adding a causative component to terms meaning ‘to swear’ or ‘to take an oath.’ In other words, ὀρκίζω, ἐνορκίζω, and ἐξορκίζω may be rendered as ‘to cause a person to say under oath.’

¹ It is possible that ὀρκίζω, ἐνορκίζω, and ἐξορκίζω differ slightly in meaning, but this cannot be determined on the basis of available contexts.

to redeem, to set free (figurative extension of meaning of ἐξαγοράζω 'to pay a price,' not occurring in the NT) to cause the release or freedom of someone by a means which proves costly to the individual causing the release A literal rendering of ἀγοράζω[b] or ἐξαγοράζω as 'to release by means of paying a price' can be misinterpreted in the sense that Christ actually engaged in some kind of monetary transaction. A literal translation may also lead to the mistaken interpretation, which was widespread in the Middle Ages, that in redeeming the believers God actually paid a price to the Devil. Obviously, ἀγοράζω in 1CO 6:20 and ἐξαγοράζω in GAL 3:13 must be understood in a figurative sense.

ἐξανάστασις

ἐξανάστασις

ἐξανάστασις (G1815)

noun, f. | -εως | ἵστημι

23.93 · Physiological Processes and States · Live, Die

to come back to life, to live again, to be resurrected, resurrection to come back to life after having once died In a number of languages there is a difficulty involved in formulating some expression for 'resurrection' or 'living again,' since such a phrase may refer to what is technically known as metempsychosis, that is to say, the rebirth of the soul in another existence, a belief which is widely held in a number of areas of south Asia. This problem may be avoided in some languages by speaking of 'his body will live again' or 'his body will come back to life' or 'he will be the same person when he lives again.'

The phrase ‘the resurrection from among the dead’ may be rendered as ‘to live again’ or ‘to live again after having died.’

to mislead, to deceive, deception to cause someone to have misleading or erroneous views concerning the truth¹

ROM 7:11 · ROM 16:18 · 1CO 3:18 · 2CO 11:3 · 2TH 2:3 · 1TI 2:14

¹ This series of meanings containing the stem ἀπατ overlaps considerably in meaning with the previous series containing the stem πλαν (31.8-31.11). Both sets of terms involve deception and erroneous views. It is difficult to determine the precise implications of differences in meaning, but it may be that terms with the stem πλαν are somewhat more related to general deceptive behavior rather than primarily to misconceptions.

Collocation: ἐξέρχομαι ἐκ τῆς ὀσφύος to be born of, to be begotten by (an idiom, literally: to come out from the loins, genitals) to be born as the result of the male role in begetting an offspring In a number of languages it is more satisfactory to speak of the male role in procreation in terms of 'being the father of' rather than employing a term which may have undesirable connotations of sexual relations.

HEB 7:5

41.24 · Behavior and Related States · Behavior, Conduct

Collocation: εἰσέρχομαι καὶ ἐξέρχομαι

to live with, to live among (idiom, literally: to go in and to go out) to live or to conduct oneself in relationship to some community or group The semantic focus of these idioms, especially in ACT 1:21 and ACT 9:28, appears to be the manner in which a person conducts himself in relationship to others, but it is possible to imply a certain amount of movement. For example, in ACT 1:21 it is possible to translate 'during the whole time the Lord Jesus travelled about with us,' and in ACT 9:28 one could translate 'Paul stayed with them and went about in Jerusalem.'

ἐξομολογέω

ἐξομολογέω

ἐξομολογέω (G1843) — ἐξομολογέομαι

verb | ὅμοιος + λέγω

33.278 · Communication · Agree to agree to to indicate agreement with a proposition or offer In some languages one may render ‘he agreed to it’ by simply saying ‘he said, I will do it.’

LUK 22:6

33.274 · (ἐξομολογέομαι[a]) · Communication · Profess Allegiance to profess, to confess, confession to express openly one’s allegiance to a proposition or person It is often extremely difficult, if not impossible, to translate ὁμολογέω[a], ὁμολογία, and ἐξομολογέω[b] by the usual expression for ‘confess,’ since this would usually imply that one has done something wrong. It is normally necessary, therefore, to employ quite a different type of relationship, usually involving a public utterance and an expression of confidence or allegiance. For example, in MAT 10:32 it may be necessary to translate ‘whoever tells people publicly that he is loyal to me, I will tell my Father that I am loyal to that person.’ Similarly, in HEB 10:23 one may translate ‘let us hold on to the hope in which we have told people we have such confidence.’ Likewise, in ROM 15:9 one may translate ‘therefore I will tell the Gentiles how I have put my confidence in you.’

For another interpretation of ἐξομολογέομαι in ROM 15:9, see 33.359.

ROM 14:11¹ · ROM 15:9

33.275 · (ἐξομολογέομαι[b]) · Communication · Admit, Confess, Deny to admit, to confess to acknowledge a fact publicly, often in reference to previous bad behavior In PHP 2:11 the statement πᾶσα γλῶσσα ἐξομολογήσεται ὅτι κύριος Ἰησοῦς Χριστός (‘that everyone may confess that Jesus Christ is Lord’) means simply to acknowledge a fact publicly, and in this instance there is no implication of previous bad behavior.

In translating MAT 3:6 in some languages, it may be useful to restructure the expression somewhat, for example, ‘they admitted to people that they had sinned’ or ‘they admitted publicly to God ...’

MAT 3:6 · MRK 1:5 · ACT 19:18 · PHP 2:11 · JAS 5:16

33.351 · (ἐξομολογέομαι[c]) · Communication · Thanks to thank, to give thanks to to acknowledge one’s thankfulness, restricted in NT usage to contexts in which God is the one being thanked

MAT 11:25 · LUK 10:21

33.359 · (ἐξομολογέομαι[d]) · Communication · Praise to praise to express praise or honor, with a possible implication of acknowledging the nature of someone or something (occurring in the NT only in quotations from the Septuagint) This meaning of ἐξομολογέομαι is almost guaranteed by the parallelism of the second line of the quotation in ROM 15:9, but for another interpretation of ROM 15:9, see 33.274.

LUK 22:6 · ROM 14:11¹ · ROM 15:9

¹ ROM 14:11 It is also possible that ἐξομολογέομαι in ROM 14:11 may mean ‘to praise,’ but many scholars assume that καὶ πᾶσα γλῶσσα ἐξομολογήσεται τῷ θεῷ should be understood in the sense of ‘and everyone will confess God’ (see 33.274 and 33.275).

ἐξορκίζω

ἐξορκίζω

ἐξορκίζω (G1844)

verb | ὀρκίζω

to put under oath, to insist that one take an oath, to require that one swear to demand that a person take an oath as to the truth of what is said or as to the certainty that one will carry out the request or command¹ It is extremely difficult to translate ὀρκίζω, ἐνορκίζω, and ἐξορκίζω in a literal manner, though in some contexts one can say ‘I put you under oath,’ but in a number of passages the person speaking is imploring and not necessarily in a position to command or insist. Therefore, in a passage such as MRK 5:7, one may render the meaning idiomatically as ‘for God’s sake, I ask you, do not punish me.’ In 1TH 5:27 one may translate ‘in the name of the Lord, I ask you to read this letter to all the Christian brothers,’ and in MAT 26:63 one may translate ‘in the name of the living God, I charge you, Tell us who you are.’

In most languages one may translate ὀρκίζω, ἐνορκίζω, and ἐξορκίζω by simply adding a causative component to terms meaning ‘to swear’ or ‘to take an oath.’ In other words, ὀρκίζω, ἐνορκίζω, and ἐξορκίζω may be rendered as ‘to cause a person to say under oath.’

¹ It is possible that ὀρκίζω, ἐνορκίζω, and ἐξορκίζω differ slightly in meaning, but this cannot be determined on the basis of available contexts.

12.44 · Supernatural Beings and Powers · Supernatural Powers power, authority, lordship, ruler, wicked force (title for supernatural forces and powers) a supernatural power having some particular role in controlling the destiny and activities of human beings Some scholars have believed that it is possible to reconstruct at least in part some of the hierarchy represented by these various supernatural forces and powers, on the basis of the neoplatonic system of nine such powers arranged in three orders of three each. NT terminology and usage does not, however, lend itself to such a classification, and it is difficult, if not impossible, to determine what are the significant differences between these supernatural powers and forces. In the case of EPH 1:21 some scholars apply the terms in question both to the supernatural and to the human sphere, thus emphasizing the totality of Christ’s rule. This has a considerable measure of justification in view of the concepts held by persons in the ancient world, since various earthly powers were supposed to reflect corresponding supernatural powers.

For the most part, translators have endeavored to render the various terms in somewhat different ways, for example, ἐξουσία as ‘authority’; δύναμις as ‘power’; κυριότης as ‘ruler’; and phrases such as τὰ πνευματικὰ τῆς πονηρίας ἐν τοῖς ἐπουρανίοις as ‘wicked spiritual forces in the heavenly world.’ In a number of languages, however, there are simply not enough terms to designate various kinds of powers, authorities, and forces which could be employed in speaking of such supernatural impersonal powers. Accordingly, some translators have simply used a phrase such as ‘any and all kinds of supernatural powers.’ Where it is possible to make certain lexical distinctions between terms and phrases, this, of course, should be done, but in a number of contexts this may be impossible, and accordingly, some explanation in a marginal note may be required if the reader is to understand satisfactorily the intent of the passages in question.

51.2 · Festivals

festival, feast, celebration the events associated with the celebration of a festival or feast Though various celebrations of the Jewish religious year have traditionally been called ‘feasts,’ it would be wrong to use a term which would suggest gluttony or wasteful abundance of food. The emphasis should be upon the ceremonial character of the eating rather than upon the extent of what was eaten. Therefore, it may be better in a number of languages to use terms referring to ‘celebrations’ or ‘festivals,’ since the festivities of such gatherings were far more important than the feasting.

ἔπαινος

ἔπαινος (G1868)

noun, m. | -ου | αἰνέω

33.354 · Communication · Praise to praise, praise to speak of the excellence of a person, object, or event In a number of languages praise can only be expressed by direct discourse, and this requires some content which provides the basis for praise. For example, in LUK 2:13 instead of a literal rendering of ‘praising God,’ it may be necessary to have ‘they said, God is wonderful,’ and in LUK 16:8 it may be necessary to translate ‘the master of this dishonest manager said, You are remarkable for having done such a clever thing.’

25.160 · Attitudes and Emotions · Courage, Boldness

Collocation: ἐπαίρω τὴν κεφαλὴν to have courage, to lift the head (an idiom, literally: to raise up the head) to demonstrate courage in the face of danger or adversity A literal rendering of ἐπαίρω τὴν κεφαλὴν ‘to lift up the head’ can be misleading in some languages, since the expression may be an idiom meaning ‘to be proud’ or ‘to try to take precedence over others.’ A more satisfactory equivalent in some languages may be ‘to look up.’

LUK 21:28

39.3 · Hostility, Strife · Opposition, Hostility

Collocation: ἐπαίρω τὴν Πτέρυναν to turn against, to oppose (an idiom, literally: to lift one’s heel against) to oppose someone by turning against such a person, possibly with focus upon the initial aspect of becoming opposed to In a number of languages a convenient way of rendering ‘to turn against’ may be ‘to become an enemy of.’

In some languages the type of foam which would be referred to in JUD 1:13 is called ‘the saliva of the waves’ or ‘the whiteness of the waves.’ Since foaming at the mouth is also regarded as a sign of anger, it is possible to speak in some languages of the foam of the waves as being ‘the anger of the waves.’ In other languages one may speak simply of ‘the whiteness of the waves.’

¹ There may be some slight difference of meaning between ἐρωτάω[a] and ἐπερωτάω[a], but this cannot be determined from existing contexts. ² ἐπερωτάω[b] may be somewhat more intensive in meaning than ἐρωτάω[b], but both seem to be somewhat weaker in urgency than αἰτέω and παραιτέομαι[a] (33.163).

ἐΠερώτημα

ἐΠερώτημα

ἐΠερώτημα (G1906)

noun, n. | -τος | ἐρωτάω

33.162 · Communication · Ask For, Request

request, appeal (derivative of ἐπερωτάω[b] ‘to ask for,’ 33.161) that which is asked for It is also possible to interpret ἐπερώτημα in 1PE 3:21 as meaning ‘pledge’ or ‘promise,’ in which case it may be classified under 33.288. Accordingly, the phrase συνειδήσεως ἀγαθῆς ἐπερώτημα εἰς θεόν may be rendered as ‘a promise made to God from a good conscience.’

by (with the accusative) a marker of agent, with the added implication of effect upon the agent It is possible that in 2TH 1:10 there is a double relation marked by ἐπί, for it may be construed as marking the affected participant with τὸ μαρτύριον and at the same time the agent participant with ἐπιστεύθη. It is this double role which may account for the use of ἐπί rather than ὑπό, which would clearly mark a relation with ἐπιστεύθη, or πρὸς, which would indicate clearly a relation with μαρτύριον.

¹ There are no doubt certain subtle distinctions in the meanings of the terms in 83.9. For example, πρὸς[d] may suggest some kind of interaction or response and παρὰ[b] may focus upon association, but it is difficult, if not impossible, on the basis of existing contexts to define precisely the differences in meaning. ² In the meaning of extension toward a goal, εἰς[a] (84.16) and ἐπὶ[e] (84.17) overlap considerably. It is, of course, possible to argue that ἐπὶ implies being on or at a point, while εἰς defines entering into an area related to some point, but such a distinction would seem to be arbitrary. ³ The difference in meaning between the set κατὰ[g], ἐπὶ[s], ἐν[s], ἐκ[k], and καθὼς[d] and the set πότε, ποτέ[b], ὁπότε, ὅτε[a], and ὅταν[b] (67.30) is largely a matter of class meanings, but there may be certain subtle rhetorical differences as well. ⁴ Since the concept of authority expresses only the manner in which the interpretation of the Law takes place, one may be justified in classifying this idiom under Domain 33 Communication. ⁵ It is very possible that the two idioms in 28.64 differ somewhat in meaning, or at least in connotation, but it is difficult, if not impossible, to show this from existing contexts.

verb | aor. ἐπέβην · ptc. ἐπιβάς · pf. ἐπιβέβηκα | βαίνω (go, walk)

15.83 · Linear Movement · Come, Come To, Arrive to come to, to arrive to move to or on to, generally with the implication of having arrived

ACT 20:18 · ACT 25:1

15.97 · Linear Movement · Come/Go Onto

to embark, to go onto, to mount to move up onto some object In a high percentage of languages it is necessary to use quite distinct terms in speaking of boarding a ship in contrast with mounting a donkey. A wrong choice in such a context can be seriously misleading.

30.7 · Think · To Think, Thought to reflect on, to think about seriously, to think deeply about to give careful consideration to various implications of an issue For another interpretation of ἐπιβάλλω in MRK 14:72, see 68.5.

MRK 14:72

68.5 · Aspect · Begin, Start

to begin to begin an activity, with special emphasis upon the inception or possibly the suddenness with which the event takes place It would also be possible to understand ἐπιβάλλω in MRK 14:72 as meaning ‘when he thought of it’ or ‘when he reflected on it’ (see 30.7).

MRK 14:72

37.110 · Control, Rule · Seize, Take into Custody

Collocation: ἐπιβάλλω τὰς χεῖρας ἐπὶ to seize, to arrest (an idiom, literally: to lay hands on) to take a person into custody for alleged illegal activity

68.6 · Aspect · Begin, Start

Collocation: ἐπιβάλλω τὴν χεῖρα ἐπ’ ἄροτρον καὶ βλέπω εἰς τὰ ὀπίσω to start to do something and then to hesitate, to begin but have second thoughts about continuing (a Semitic idiom, literally: one who puts his hand to the plow and looks back) to begin some activity requiring close attention but then to change one’s mind about proceeding It is probably best to regard the phrase ἐπιβαλὼν τὴν χεῖρα ἐπ’ ἄροτρον καὶ βλέπων εἰς τὰ ὀπίσω as a part of a traditional saying referring to anyone who has second thoughts about undertaking some new or different enterprise, but the particular manner in which this is adapted to a statement concerning ‘the kingdom of God’ makes its strictly idiomatic structure somewhat doubtful.

LUK 9:62³

¹ The meanings of ἐπιβάλλω[a] (15.218) and ἐπιρίπτω (15.219) parallel to a certain extent the distinction in βάλλω[a] (15.215) and ρίπτω[a] (15.217) in that βάλλω[a] suggests a more deliberate action, while ρίπτω[a] suggests an action characterized by being quicker, more energetic, and often somewhat more impetuous. ² MRK 4:37 It would be possible to analyze the meaning of ἐπιβάλλω[c] as merely a matter of impact, but it is the evident action of the waves, not only in striking the boat but filling it with water, that would seem to justify setting up a separate meaning. ³ LUK 9:62 The phrases ἐπιβάλλω τὰς χεῖρας and ἐπιβάλλω τὴν χεῖρα ἐπὶ also occur with events, and as such focus attention on the beginning of an event, for example, οὐδείς ἐπιβαλὼν τὴν χεῖρα ἐπ' ἄροτρον 'no one puts his hand to the plow' or 'no one begins to plow' LUK 9:62. A treatment of this meaning is in 68.6.

ἐπίβλημα (G1915)

noun, n. | -τος | βάλλω

6.157 · Artifacts · Cloth, Leather, and Objects Made of Such Materials patch a piece of cloth sewed on clothing to repair a hole or tear The statement in MAT 9:16 that ‘no one puts a patch of new cloth on an old garment’ seems almost preposterous or incredible in some societies, since people habitually repair old clothing by putting on patches of new cloth, sometimes to the point where it is difficult to determine what was the original fabric. In MAT 9:16 the phrase ῥάκους ἀγνάφου, often translated ‘new cloth,’ is literally ‘unshrunk cloth,’ in other words, cloth which has not been washed one or more times and thus has been shrunk in the process. In biblical times there was no technique for preshrinking cloth.

MAT 17:12 · 1CO 16:18

¹ It is possible that ἐπιγινώσκω[b] differs somewhat in meaning from γινώσκω[d] in focusing attention on what is understood or indicating that the process of understanding is somewhat more emphatic, but such a distinction cannot be determined from existing contexts. ² Though ἐπιγινώσκω does occur in certain legal contexts, it still means essentially to acquire more exact or detailed information, and therefore it does not seem necessary to set up a distinct meaning for ἐπιγινώσκω merely because of its use in such contexts.

The closest noun reference is τὰ ἱμάτια ‘the garments,’ but in view of Matthew’s quotation and evident interpretation of the reference to ZEC 9:9, both the donkey and the colt may be the substantive referents, though being seated upon two animals at the same time poses real problems of understanding.

to call, to name to use an attribution in speaking of a person It is not always possible to determine from the context whether the act involved is an initial naming of a person or simply calling a person by a particular name. Likewise in the case of attributions or titles, it is not always possible to determine whether it is a matter of giving an attribution or title to a person or simply a matter of speaking of or to a person by means of such an attribution or title. In some instances the giving of a title may be made indirect. For example, in MAT 1:23 the statement ‘and they will call his name Emmanuel’ suggests the giving of a title, but the process is stated in terms of how people will speak of this person.

¹ The various terms noted in 35.1 (ἀντιλαμβάνω[a], ἐπιλαμβάνομαι[d], ὑπολαμβάνω[c], συμβάλλω[e], παρίστημι[l], ἀντέχω[c], ἐπαρκέω[a], βοηθέω, βοήθεια[a]) with a generic meaning of ‘help’ no doubt possess certain contrastive features of meaning, at least of a connotative type, but there is no specific evidence of this in NT usage. ² HEB 2:16 · HEB 2:16 It is difficult to know whether ἐπιλαμβάνομαι in a context such as HEB 2:16 refers principally or even in a significant measure to the intellectual concern rather than the more practical implication of giving help. It is specifically for that reason that ἐπιλαμβάνομαι is classified in both Domain 30 and Domain 35. ³ There are no doubt certain subtle distinctions of meaning in this series of related expressions in 90.63 (ἀπολαμβάνω[e], ἐπιλαμβάνομαι[f], λαμβάνω[h], μεταλαμβάνω[b]), but it is difficult to determine the precise distinctions on the basis of existing contexts. As in the case of a number of verbs which mark an experiencer relation, an equivalent translation consists simply of a passive form of a verb related to the noun complement. For example, in the case of JHN 7:23, one might very well translate ‘if a person is circumcised on the Sabbath.’

ἐπισιτισμός

ἐπισιτισμός

ἐπισιτισμός (G1979)

noun, m. | -οῦ | σῖτος

5.1 · Foods and Condiments · Food

food any kind of food or nourishment¹ Almost all languages have at least a few general terms for food, though these may be derived from verbal expressions meaning essentially ‘that which is eaten.’ In some instances a distinction may be made between ‘that which is chewed’ and ‘that which is drunk,’ and it may therefore be important in certain contexts to speak of food in general by a phrase meaning ‘that which is either chewed or drunk.’ If one fails to include both types of food, the reader might interpret a passage such as MAT 6:11 as requesting only solid foods.

In the place of a general term or phrase such as ‘that which is eaten’ or ‘that which is consumed,’ some languages generalize the meaning of a particular term. For example, in certain parts of the Orient the term meaning specifically ‘rice’ also refers to ‘food’ in general. In fact, some persons will declare, ‘I have not eaten!’ if they have not had rice as part of a meal. A similar type of meaning has developed in English with respect to ‘bread.’ For example, in rendering LUK 4:4 (οὐκ ἐπ’ ἄρτῳ μόνῳ ζήσεται ὁ ἄνθρωπος ‘man shall not live by bread alone’) it would be wrong to employ a strictly literal rendering, since this might mean simply that people should not live on a diet consisting solely of bread. The meaning of LUK 4:4 is, of course, ‘to live means more than merely eating.’

¹ There are no doubt certain subtle differences of meaning in the various terms listed here as meaning food, but it is impossible to determine such distinctions in meaning from NT contexts. Perhaps τροφή and διατροφή are somewhat more generic in meaning and may suggest a greater emphasis upon nourishment. At the same time, βρώσις[c] and βρώμα[a] may imply solid substantive food, but it is difficult, if not impossible, to argue for such subtle connotative distinctions in meanings which are essentially generic.

ἐπισκηνόω

ἐπισκηνόω

ἐπισκηνόω (G1981)

verb | σκηνόω (live [in a tent]) · σκηνή

85.75 · Existence in Space · Dwell, Reside

to take up residence, to come to reside, to come to dwell to come to dwell in a place defined psychologically or spiritually (with the possible implication in some contexts of a temporary arrangement) In their NT contexts, σκηνόω and ἐπισκηνόω are essentially figurative in meaning, for they deal with spiritual existence and residence rather than human residence or dwelling. In translating one should, in so far as possible, try to preserve this important figurative relationship, since it expresses one of the most significant ways in which spiritual and human existence can be combined. In some languages, however, it may be necessary to employ an expression which means simply ‘to be in’ or ‘to continue with,’ since expressions for ‘living’ or ‘dwelling’ may be based upon terms which are too specific in meaning, for example, ‘to eat from the same pot’ or ‘to enter by the same door.’

2CO 12:9

ἐπισκιάζω

ἐπισκιάζω

ἐπισκιάζω (G1982)

verb | σκιάζω (shade, overshadow) · σκιά

14.62 · Physical Events and States · Darkness to cast a shadow upon to cause a shadow by interposing something between an object and a source of light In ACT 5:15 there is a semantic duplication of the element of ‘shadow’ in view of the noun σκιά and the verb ἐπισκιάζω. In MAT 17:5 the shining cloud would not produce the same kind of shadow as in the case of ACT 5:15, but it would be interposed between (1) the sun and (2) Jesus and his disciples. In MAT 17:5 the shining cloud may thus be more like a covering than a shadow. The reference to this shining cloud in MAT 17:5 as the Shekinah of God is discussed in 14.49 and 14.50.

In LUK 1:35 ἐπισκιάζω is used figuratively in speaking of the agency of the Holy Spirit in causing Mary to conceive: πνεῦμα ἅγιον ἐπελεύσεται ἐπὶ σέκαί δύναμις ὑψίστου ἐπισκιάσει σοί the Holy Spirit will come upon you and the power of the Most High will overshadow you.

In a number of languages it is not possible, however, to translate ἐπισκιάζω literally as ‘overshadow.’ It may therefore be necessary to use some such expression as the power of the Most High will come to you or God’s power will come upon you. A strictly literal rendering of ἐπισκιάζω in LUK 1:35 could be interpreted in some languages as being a rather crude reference to sexual intercourse, and this interpretation should be avoided.

verb | σκοπέω

35.39 · Help, Care For · Care For, Take Care Of

to look after, to take care of, to see to to care for or look after, with the implication of continuous responsibility For another interpretation of ἐπισκοπέω in HEB 12:15, see 30.46.

HEB 12:15 · 1PE 5:2

to give careful attention to, to consider carefully, to guard against to give careful consideration to something, with the implication of guarding against For another interpretation of ἐπισκοπέω in HEB 12:15, see 35.39. Some scholars have seen in the occurrence of ἐπισκοπέω in HEB 12:15 a meaning at least somewhat similar to that which occurs in ἐπισκοπέω[c] ‘to be responsible, to care for’ (53.70).

HEB 12:15

53.70 · Religious Activities · Roles and Functions

to minister unto, to be responsible, to care for to have responsibility for the care of someone, implying a somewhat official responsibility within a congregation It is possible, however, that ἐπισκοπέω in 1PE 5:2 is not to be understood as designating some official responsibility but merely as a role of helping and serving (see 35.39).

ACT 1:20 · 1TI 3:1

35.40 · Help, Care For · Care For, Take Care Of position of responsibility, position of oversight (derivative of ἐπισκοπέω[a] 'to take care of,' 35.39) the position of one who has responsibility for the care of someone Though in some contexts ἐπισκοπή has been regarded traditionally as a position of authority, in reality the focus is upon the responsibility for caring for others, and in the context of ACT 1:20 the reference is clearly to the responsibility for caring for the church (see 53.69).

ACT 1:20

ἐπίσκοπος

ἐπίσκοπος

ἐπίσκοπος (G1985)

noun, m. | -ου | σκοπέω

35.43 · Help, Care For · Care For, Take Care Of one responsible for, one who cares for, guardian, keeper one who has the responsibility of caring for spiritual concerns In 1PE 2:25 ἐπίσκοπος is applied to Christ, and it no doubt shares certain of the meanings associated with ἐπίσκοπος[b] in 53.71, but the focus in 1PE 2:25 is not upon leadership but upon the role of caring for the believers.

1PE 2:25

53.71 · Religious Activities · Roles and Functions

church leader one who serves as a leader in a church For ἐπίσκοπος in 1PE 2:25, see 35.43.

In translating ἐπισκοπή[b] (53.69), ἐπισκοπέω[c] (53.70), or ἐπίσκοπος[b], it is important to try to combine the concepts of both service and leadership, in other words, the responsibility of caring for the needs of a congregation as well as directing the activities of the membership. In some translations an equivalent may be 'helper' and 'leader.'

ἐπισπάομαι

ἐπισπάομαι

ἐπισπάομαι (G1986)

verb | σπάομαι

53.52 · Religious Activities · Dedicate, Consecrate

to conceal circumcision, to extend the foreskin (a technical and medical term) to pull the foreskin over the end of the penis as a means of concealing former circumcision A literal and descriptive rendering of ἐπισπάομαι could prove to be quite vulgar in some languages. Furthermore, such a practice might seem to be medically impossible or absurd, so that in general, translators have used some such expression as 'do not conceal the circumcision' or ‘do not change the circumcision to appear like uncircumcision,’ but often some additional marginal note is required if people are to understand satisfactorily what is involved.

39.34 · Hostility, Strife · Rebellion revolt, insurrection, rebellion rising up in open defiance of authority, with the presumed intention to overthrow it or to act in complete opposition to its demands¹ It is also possible that ἀποστασία differs slightly in meaning from ἐπίστασις[b] by virtue of the differences in prefixal formation, but there is insufficient contextual evidence to support such a view.

ACT 24:12

35.42 · Help, Care For · Care For, Take Care Of responsibility for, concern for, care of responsibility for oversight based upon authority Though one might regard ἐπίστασις as meaning only the position of authority, nevertheless this authority is expressed in terms of the oversight and care of others. In a sense the meaning of ἐπίστασις in 2CO 11:28 is defined by the following appositional phrase, ἡ μέριμνα Πασῶν τῶν ἐκκλησιῶν ‘concern for all the churches.’ For another interpretation of ἐπίστασις in 2CO 11:28, see 25.239.

¹ It is possible that ἐπανίστημι and ἐπίστασις[b], with the prefix ἐπι, differ in some measure from ἀνίστημι[h] and στάσις[a] by virtue of the prefixal element which may suggest action directed specifically toward some object, but there is insufficient contextual evidence to support such distinct meanings.

letter (normally written on papyrus) an object containing writing addressed to one or more persons In some languages it may be necessary to try to distinguish between a letter as an object and a letter as content or message. In ACT 23:33 the focus seems to be upon the letter as an object, not necessarily upon the contents of the document. In most contexts, however, it is impossible to distinguish between a letter as a material object and a letter as a message (see 33.48).

90.87 · Case · To Cause To Experience

to subject to to subject someone to a particular experience, normally by the use of force In REV 22:18, there is obviously a play on two different meanings of ἐπιτίθημι, ‘to add to’ and ‘to subject to.’ In the preceding clause ἐάν τις ἐπιθῇ ἐπ’ αὐτά, the meaning is clearly ‘if anyone adds to these’ (see ἐπιτίθημι[b], 59.72), but in the second clause there is both the addition as well as the subjection of a person to punishment.

heavenly, in heaven, pertaining to heaven (derivative of οὐρανός[b] heaven, 1.11) related to or located in heaven The derivatives οὐράνιος and ἐΠουράνιος[b] are essentially equivalent to semantic compounds in that they combine a semantic element of heaven as a celestial abode with another semantic element specifying location or relationship. Frequently such terms are translated as ‘in heaven’ or ‘from heaven’ or ‘belonging to heaven.’

from God (derivative of οὐρανός[c] ‘God,’ 12.16) pertaining to being derived from God Though it is possible to interpret HEB 3:1 as a ‘calling which comes from heaven,’ it seems more appropriate in terms of the frequent references to ‘calling’ to recognize that the use of ἐπουράνιος in this context is simply a substitute for a direct reference to God. Accordingly, the passage may be effectively rendered as ‘those who have been called by God’ or ‘those whom God has called.’

JHN 3:12 · HEB 3:1 · HEB 6:4

1.26 · Geographical Objects and Features · Heavenly Bodies

Collocation: σῶμα ἐπουράνιον heavenly body (an idiom, literally: heavenly body, occurring in the NT only in the plural²) the luminous objects in the sky: sun, moon, and other planets and stars See also 1.8.

The phrase σῶμα ἐπουράνιον is a highly generic expression which in the plural is sometimes translatable as ‘lights in the sky,’ but more often than not it may be necessary to identify the various heavenly bodies as ‘sun, moon, and stars.’ In certain contexts one may also wish to identify the planets, often spoken of as ‘wandering stars’ or ‘moving stars’ (reflecting the etymology of the English word planet, which is derived from a Greek word meaning ‘wanderer’). These are, of course, not to be confused with shooting stars and comets in the sky.

1CO 15:40 · 1CO 15:40

¹ EPH 6:12 It is possible that the adjectival derivative ἐπουράνιος in EPH 6:12 should be interpreted as a designation for the area of the sky in which wicked spiritual forces were, the supernatural aspects of these wicked forces and the challenge which such forces were regarded as posing for God and his hosts may justify relating such forces to the heavenly world rather than merely to the sky. ² It is difficult to say whether the phrase σῶμα ἐπουράνιον should be treated as a fixed phrase with a shifted meaning for the head word σῶμα and thus a type of idiom, or whether it should be considered a semantically endocentric expression and thus not a so-called lexical unit. The treatment of σῶμα ἐπουράνιον as semantically endocentric can certainly be justified by the highly generic meaning of σῶμα as body, object, but one may also argue that the restriction in reference to the sun, moon, planets, and stars provides a basis for regarding it as semantically exocentric.

to cause, encouragement a marker of a causative relation, with the implication of stimulating a change in motivation or attitude The relevant action in 2CO 9:2b comes from the immediately preceding statements in 2CO 9:1-2CO 9:2a.

¹ 2CO 9:2 In the case of 2CO 9:2 it is difficult to know precisely how much meaning to attach to ἐρεθίζω in the sense of ‘to encourage’ or ‘to motivate.’ It is possible that ἐρεθίζω retains in this context a considerable amount of its more common meaning (see 88.168). But in 2CO 9:2 it may also represent an instance in which the original meaning of a term has been largely lost or at least reduced to primarily a marker of causative relation. It appears likely that παροξυσμός in HEB 10:24 has also been largely reduced to a marker of a causative relation, in other words, ‘to cause people to love and to do good,’ but since in this instance there seems to be some focus upon the psychological factors involved, one may translate παροξυσμός as ‘to encourage.’

ἐρημία

ἐρημία (G2047)

noun, f. | -ας | ἐρημόομαι

1.86 · Geographical Objects and Features · Areas Which Are Uninhabited or Only Sparsely Populated desert, wilderness, lonely place a largely uninhabited region, normally with sparse vegetation (in contrast with πόλις[a] ‘a population center,’ 1.88) The phrase ἄνυδρος τόπος (MAT 12:43, LUK 11:24), literally ‘waterless place,’ is a set phrase equivalent to ἐρημία and may be translated as ‘wilderness’ or ‘uninhabited country.’

Throughout the NT ἐρημία and ἔρημος[b] focus primarily upon the lack of population rather than upon sparse vegetation, though the two features are closely related ecologically in the Middle East.

In most languages the most satisfactory equivalent of ἐρημία and ἔρημος[b] is a word or phrase suggesting a place where few if any people live. Such expressions are generally far better than a word meaning ‘a bare place’ or ‘a place of sand,’ since in some languages such expressions could mean only a clearing in the forest or a sandy beach along a river bank. In the case of translations being made for people living in jungle areas, it may, however, be necessary to describe in a footnote the nature of an ἐρημία in NT times.

kid, he-goat, goat (the diminutive of ἔριφος but without special diminutive meaning¹) kid, he-goat in the singular and goats in the plural (in the plural form both male and female goats are included in the reference) Since goats are so widely distributed throughout the world, there is usually little or no difficulty involved in finding a satisfactory term. The difficulty arises, however, in the connotations of the term for goat, especially in contrast with sheep. In contrast with usage in the Bible, in many parts of the tropical world goats are much more highly prized than sheep, because they can forage well for themselves and are appreciated for their meat. Sheep, on the other hand, are often regarded as scavengers and are much less valued. One should not reverse biblical statements about sheep and goats, but marginal notes and a fuller explanation of cultural differences in a glossary are important.

creeping animal, reptile, snake general word for reptile that includes snakes and lizards Though ἐρπετόν is often interpreted as referring only to snakes, it also includes in biblical contexts (as the result of the influence of classifications based on Hebrew terminology, as in GEN 1:25 GEN 1:26 GEN 1:30 a number of small four-footed animals as well as snakes, for example, rats, mice, frogs, toads, salamanders, and lizards. However, in the various NT contexts (for example ACT 10:12 ACT 11:6 ROM 1:23 JAS 3:7 where ‘creeping things’ are contrasted with birds, animals, and fish) it is probably more satisfactory to use a term which designates primarily snakes. In a number of languages a very important distinction is made between four-footed reptiles (such as lizards) and snakes. If such a distinction is made, it is then probably better to use a term which designates only snakes, since a term for ‘animals’ will probably also include lizards.

to pretend to be good, to act hypocritically, to come in sheep's clothing (an idiom, literally: to come in sheep's clothing) to pretend to be harmless when in reality one is dangerous and destructive. In many languages it is possible to retain the idiom ἔρχομαι ἐν ἐνδύμασιν Προβάτων, since the context seems to explain rather clearly what is meant. However, in a number of languages it may be necessary to translate ἔρχομαι ἐν ἐνδύμασιν Προβάτων as 'to come looking like sheep' or 'to come looking as innocent as sheep.'

MAT 7:15

¹ ἔρχομαι[a] involves a highly generic meaning of movement from one place to another, either coming or going. In this sense ἔρχομαι[a] contrasts with the meaning of ἔρχομαι[b] to come (15.81), which in turn contrasts in certain contexts with ὑπάγω[b] to go away from (15.35). In other words, ἔρχομαι occurs on two taxonomic levels in the domain of Linear Movement: (1) generic, including both coming and going, and (2) to come, in contrast with to go. This type of analysis seems far more legitimate than trying to set up highly complex series of shifts in so-called perspective viewpoint. See also footnote b. ² ἔρχομαι[b] to come or to come to is a more restricted or specific meaning than ἔρχομαι[a], which means either to come or to go, that is to say, simply to move from one place to another without specifying any viewpoint character or place (see 15.7). See also footnote a.

ἐσθίω (G5315)

verb | fut. φάγομαι · aor. ἔφαγον · inf. φαγεῖν | κατεσθίω · συνεσθίω

to eat, to drink, to consume food, to use food to consume food, usually solids, but also liquids¹ As noted in the contexts of MAT 12:1 and 1CO 9:7, ἐσθίω[a] is generic in the sense that it includes the consumption of both solid foods and liquids, but ἐσθίω is not employed in referring to the drinking of alcoholic beverages (see μεθύω[b] to drink freely of wine or beer, 23.37).

In some languages an important distinction is made in terms for ‘eating’ depending upon whether the eating is done by an adult or by a very small child, who in most instances must be helped to eat. Other distinctions in terminology for eating may involve the quantities of food (whether small or extensive), the rapidity with which one eats (gulping or mincing), the state of what is eaten (raw, fresh, cooked) or the type of food, for example, meat, cereal, fruit, or leafy vegetable.

¹ In some languages a very fundamental distinction is made between terms referring to the consumption of solid foods in contrast with liquids (either beverages or soups). For the most part, however, a term meaning ‘eat’ is more generic than one meaning ‘drink,’ since the former is frequently employed to describe the consumption of any type of nourishment, while a term meaning ‘drink’ refers only to beverages or very thin soups or broths. Still further important distinctions are made in some languages between the consumption of so-called ‘cold foods’ and ‘hot foods.’ This distinction is not, however, based upon the temperature of the food itself but upon the physiological effect which such foods are supposed to have upon the body in causing coolness or heat. A further important distinction may be made with respect to terms referring to animals eating in contrast with humans eating.

insider (a figurative extension of meaning of ἔσω ‘inside,’ 83.13) a person belonging to a so-called in-group (in other words, not being a member of the out-group in question) See also 11.10.

In the rendering of 1CO 5:12 it may be necessary to be quite specific about those who constitute outsiders and insiders, for example, ‘why should I judge those who are not believers? should you not judge the believers?’ Note the rendering of TEV for 1CO 5:12: “After all, it is none of my business to judge outsiders. God will judge them. But should you not judge the members of your own fellowship? As the scripture says, ‘Remove the evil man from your group.’ ”

26.1 · Psychological Faculties

Collocation: ὁ ἔσω (ἄνθρωπος)

the inner being, the inmost being, inwardly (an idiom, literally: the inner (person)) the psychological faculty, including intellectual, emotional, and spiritual aspects, in contrast with the purely physical aspects of human existence In a number of languages it is quite impossible to speak of the psychological faculty of a person as being merely ‘that which is within.’ It is frequently necessary to refer to a particular organ of the body, for example, ‘the heart’ or ‘the liver’ or ‘the spleen.’ In some languages, however, one may refer to this faculty as being ‘the person who stands inside’ or ‘the real person’ or even ‘the other person.’

In LUK 17:21 the phrase ἐντὸς ὑμῶν in the statement ἰδοὺ γὰρ ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ θεοῦ ἐντὸς ὑμῶν ἐστὶν ‘look, God’s reign is within you’ may constitute a reference to the same inner being designated by the phrases ὁ ἔσω and ὁ ἐν τῷ κυπτῷ. On this basis some scholars have suggested that the phrase ἐντὸς ὑμῶν can be interpreted as a potentiality for participation and hence be translated ‘within your grasp,’ but it is more likely that one should understand the phrase ἐντὸς ὑμῶν in LUK 17:21 as a spacial relationship, for example, ‘in your midst’ or ‘among you’ (see 83.9).

ROM 7:22 · 2CO 4:16 · EPH 3:16

¹ In contexts where an accompanying expression designates movement into an area, ἐν[a] and εἰς[d] may be rendered as ‘into.’

a person's inner self, the inner being, within oneself (a figurative extension of meaning of ἔσωθεν[a] ‘from inside,’ 84.14) the inner being of a person as the source or agent of thought or behavior A literal translation of ἔσωθεν δέ εἰσιν λύκοι ἄρπαγες in MAT 7:15 as ‘on the inside they are ravaging wolves’ could be seriously misleading, since in some cultures certain people are regarded as actually being animals but disguised as human beings. It may therefore be necessary to make some adjustments in this passage and to translate as ‘but what they want to do makes them like wild wolves’ or ‘but their minds are like the minds of wild wolves.’ On the other hand, one could employ a strictly literal translation and then have a footnote indicating that this statement in the Scriptures does not confirm local beliefs concerning animals disguised as humans.

¹ Some persons have assumed that the distinction between ἄλλος and ἕτερος is simply a difference between what is another in a series and that which is significantly different in kind, but such a distinction cannot be confirmed from existing contexts, though there may be this type of distinction implied in GAL 1:6, GAL 1:7 in which another kind of gospel is rejected on the basis that there is no other gospel. Note, however, that both ἄλλος and ἕτερος also occur in the meaning of another, which is not the same (see 58.37). ² Rather than treat these phrases as lexical units, one can interpret them as elliptical expressions with the omission of the dative of ἡμέρα[a] day (67.178).

verb | εὐνή + ἔχω

9.26 · People · Males

to make a eunuch, to castrate (derivative of εὐνοῦχος[a] 'eunuch,' 9.25) to cause a person to be a eunuch Sometimes one may render εὐνουχίζω as 'to cause a person not to be able to have marital relations.'

In a number of languages the castration of a man is referred to by a term very different from what is employed in the case of the castration of an animal.

to be celibate, to live without marrying (used with a reflexive pronoun) to live without engaging in sexual relations

εὐνοῦχος

εὐνοῦχος

εὐνοῦχος (G2135)

noun, m. | -ου | εὐνή + ἔχω

9.25 · People · Males

eunuch a castrated male person¹ In the ancient Middle East eunuchs were frequently in charge of royal harems and sometimes rose to high positions of state. The reference to the eunuch in ACT 8:34 is best interpreted as ‘court official’ (see 37.85).

Since in many societies castration of human males is not known, any attempt to employ a descriptive explanation within the text might seem unnecessarily crude and even vulgar. A number of translators have therefore preferred to borrow a term for eunuch and then place the explanation of its meaning in a glossary or word list.

9.29 · People · Males

celibate a male person who abstains from marriage without being necessarily impotent¹

MAT 19:12

37.85 · Control, Rule · Rule, Govern

court official, eunuch an official of an Oriental court who was entrusted with various important responsibilities and who was also a eunuch In a context such as ACT 8:34, the focus of meaning of εὐνοῦχος[d] seems to be upon the person’s official responsibilities and position rather than upon his physical condition. It may therefore be more in keeping with the context to employ an expression such as ‘official of the court’ or ‘important official.’ On the other hand, in view of a eunuch’s limited acceptance in Jewish religion, the mention of the physical condition would fit Luke’s theological purposes well.

ACT 8:27 · ACT 8:34 · ACT 8:36 · ACT 8:38 · ACT 8:39

¹ It would be possible to treat εὐνοῦχος[a][b][c] (9.25, 28, 29) as identifying various physiological states resulting from the different processes or states referred to by the verb εὐνουχίζω (9.26 and 9.27), but since εὐνοῦχος is frequently used absolutely in various senses, these three meanings seem best classified under the subdomain of Males.

εὐρακύλων

εὐρακύλων (G2148a) — Εὐρακύλων

noun, m. | -ωνος

14.9 · Physical Events and States · Wind

Collocation: Εὐρακύλων

a Northeaster a hybrid formation from Greek and Latin, meaning literally either ‘east wind’ or ‘broad wind’: a strong storm wind blowing from the northeast It is, of course, possible to use the form Εὐρακύλων as a proper name, but this is probably much less meaningful than employing a term such as ‘strong northeast wind’ or ‘a strong storm coming from the northeast.’ In instances in which languages do not readily and easily distinguish between north and northeast or between east and northeast, it may be satisfactory simply to use a term such as ‘east,’ but frequently one can use a designation for ‘northeast’ such as ‘between the north and the east’ or ‘a little to the north of east.’

ACT 27:14¹

¹ ACT 27:14 Some manuscripts read Εὐροκλύδων, explained as ‘an east wind that stirs up waves.’ Another form is Εὐρυκλύδων ‘the wind that stirs up broad waves.’ These two forms, however, are regarded by most scholars as being scribal errors

εὐχή

εὐχή

εὐχή (G2171)

noun, f. | -ῆς | εὐχομα

33.178 · Communication · Pray

prayer the act of speaking to or making requests of God¹ In some languages there are a number of different terms used for prayer depending upon the nature of the content, for example, requests for material blessing, pleas for spiritual help, intercession for others, thanksgiving, and praise. There may also be important distinctions on the basis of urgency and need. The most generic expression for prayer may simply be ‘to speak to God.’ It is normally best to avoid an expression which means primarily ‘to recite.’

JAS 5:15

33.469 · Communication · Swear, Put Under Oath, Vow

vow a promise to God that one will do something, with the implication that failure to act accordingly will result in divine sanctions against the person in question It may, however, be necessary in some languages to be somewhat more specific in rendering ‘vow,’ so that one may need to translate this expression in ACT 21:23 as ‘there are four men here who have promised God that they will do something.’

ACT 18:18 · ACT 21:23

¹ It is possible that εὐχομαι[a] and προσεύχομαι differ somewhat in the extent to which focus is upon the person to whom the prayer is addressed, but this cannot be determined from NT usage.

work group, division a class or division of persons who perform certain daily duties (in the one NT occurrence, a reference to a group of priests performing certain functions in the Temple at Jerusalem) It may be necessary to expand somewhat the expression ‘the work group of Abijah’ (LUK 1:5) to read ‘a work group known as the division of Abijah.’ Otherwise, one might get the impression that this was a work group under the command of Abijah or a group of persons who belonged specifically to the person named Abijah. If it is difficult to obtain a satisfactory expression for ‘work group,’ one can of course translate the final clause of LUK 1:5 as simply ‘who belonged to a group of priests known as the group of Abijah.’

23.129 · Physiological Processes and States · Health, Vigor, Strength

Collocation: καλῶς ἔχω

to be well, to be healthy (an idiom, literally: to have well) the state of being healthy, well (in contrast with sickness) In a number of languages health is expressed only in terms of strength, for ‘to be well’ is ‘to be strong.’ In other languages, however, to be well or to be healthy is a negation of illness or sickness, so that in MRK 16:18 one may translate ‘they will place their hands on those who are sick and these people will become not sick.’

23.50 · Physiological Processes and States · Birth, Procreation

Collocation: κοίτην ἔχω

pregnant, to be pregnant (an idiom, literally: to have bed, though in combination with ἔχω, κοίτη early acquired the metonymic meaning of sexual relations) to be in a state of pregnancy This expression contrasts with the meaning of συλλαμβάνω[b], 23.49, in that it seems to focus more upon the state of pregnancy rather than the event of conception.

ROM 9:10

83.29 · (ἐχόμενος) · Spacial Positions · At, Beside, Near, Far

23.50 · Physiological Processes and States · Birth, Procreation

Collocation: ἐν γαστρὶ ἔχω pregnant, to be pregnant (an idiom, literally: to have in the womb) to be in a state of pregnancy This expression contrasts with the meaning of συλλαμβάνω[b], 23.49, in that it seems to focus more upon the state of pregnancy rather than the event of conception.

It is impossible to determine whether in MAT 1:23 (ἐν γαστρὶ ἔξει καὶ τέξεται υἱόν ‘she will be pregnant and bear a son’) the focus is upon the state of pregnancy or the fact of conception (see 23.49).

¹ Ownership usually entails to a greater or lesser degree the social sanctions of the right by the owner to use the object in question and the obligation by non-owners to recognize that right and to desist from such usage.

² This meaning of have/possess contrasts with hold, grasp (Domain 18), the whole/part relation (Domain 63), to be in a relationship to (Domain 89), to be in a state or condition (Domain 13), and to have authority, power, or control over persons or objects, either sociologically or physically (Domain 37). ³ MAT 3:4 One might argue that ἔχω in MAT 3:4 means merely ‘to possess’ (57.1), but obviously there is more in the context of MAT 3:4 than just possessing certain types of clothing. What is relevant is the habitual wearing of such clothing. ⁴ ACT 16:16 The phrase ἔχω πνεῦμα πύθωνα may focus upon the capacity to be a fortuneteller, but the implication is that the individual involved served as a fortuneteller. It is, however, possible to treat this expression in a somewhat different manner, as indicated in 12.48. ⁵ Rather than treat these phrases as lexical units, one can interpret them as elliptical expressions with the omission of the dative of ἡμέρα[a] day (67.178).

¹ ἕως, ἄχρι, and μέχρι frequently occur with a postposed marker of indefinite temporal reference: ὅ, occurring with all three markers, and ὅτου with ἕως. ² It is probable that ἕως[c], ἄχρι[c], and μέχρι[b] differ slightly in meaning, but this cannot be readily determined from existing contexts.
