53.85 · Religious Activities · Roles and Functions

to serve as a priest, to be a priest to serve as a priest in the performance of religious rites and duties In contrast with the prophet who speaks to people on behalf of God, the priest is often defined as one who represents the people before God. In reality, however, the priest is one who is primarily engaged in religious ritual and ceremony in contrast with the prophet, whose primary activity is involved in proclaiming a message. In societies in which there is no organized priesthood and where there are only medicine men or shamans, it has often been possible to translate ἱερουργέω and ἱερατεύω as simply ‘to be God’s shaman.’ Whether such an expression can be used depends very largely upon the connotations associated with shamanism.

ιερόθυτος

ιερόθυτος (G1494a)

adjc. | -ον | ιερατεύω + θύω

53.21 · Religious Activities · Offering, Sacrifice

what has been sacrificed, having been sacrificed to a deity pertaining to being sacrificed to a deity In some cultures sacrificing is not practiced, and even the idea of killing an animal as a gift to a deity seems not only strange but even abhorrent. In such languages no special term is to be found for sacrifice, and it may therefore be necessary to use a phrase such as ‘to kill an animal and give it to God’ or ‘to kill an animal in honor of God.’ In such cases, however, it is obviously necessary to have some kind of supplementary note or glossary statement which will attempt to explain the significance and function of sacrifice in the Bible.

ιεροπρεπής

ιεροπρεπής (G2412)

adjc. | -ές | ιερατεύω + πρέπει

53.6 · Religious Activities · Religious Practice

devout, pious, religious pertaining to being devoted to a proper expression of religious beliefs¹ In a number of languages the concept of ‘living a godly life’ may be best expressed as ‘to live as God would have one live’ or ‘to live like one should who believes in God’ or ‘to always do what God requires.’ In some languages, however, the only equivalent is ‘to live a good life’ or ‘to live always doing good to others.’ The shift from the focus upon religious belief to good living or being good to others results from the fact that in some religious systems there is little or no connection between religious beliefs and moral behavior.

TIT 2:3

¹ There are no doubt certain subtle differences of meaning in this series, but it is difficult to define these distinctions on the basis of existing contexts.

ιερὸς

ιερὸς

ιερὸς (G2413) — ιερόν

adjc. | -ά, -όν | ιερατεύω

53.9 · Religious Activities · Religious Practice

holy pertaining to being appropriate for the expression of worship and reverence In 1CO 9:13 the reference of the expression οἱ τὰ ἱερὰ ἐργαζόμενοι is the activities in the Temple involving the performance of various rituals. In a number of languages, however, it is difficult to speak of ‘holy writings’ or ‘holy activities.’ In some instances one may use an expression which refers to positive taboo, that is to say, something which has been dedicated exclusively to the service of God, but in other languages it may be necessary to use some phrase which identifies objects or activities as being ‘appropriate for worship’ or ‘characteristic of worship’ or ‘involved in worship.’

MRK 16:8 · 1CO 9:13 · 2TI 3:15

7.16 · Constructions · Buildings

Collocation: ιερόν

temple a temple or sanctuary (ναός[a], 7.15) and the surrounding consecrated area With the exception of ιερόν in ACT 19:27 (a reference to the temple of Artemis in Ephesus), ιερόν in the NT refers to the Temple in Jerusalem, including the entire Temple precinct with its buildings, courts, and storerooms.

In a number of languages ἱερόν is rendered normally as ‘the house of God,’ or, as in ACT 19:27, ‘the house of the goddess Artemis.’ In a number of languages, however, there are technical terms for ‘temple,’ and these are often carefully distinguished from an expression designating a central sanctuary in which the deity is thought to dwell (ναός[a]).

Though in a number of contexts it is not necessary to distinguish between ἱερόν and ναός, in MAT 21:12 (and parallel passages: MRK 11:15, LUK 19:45, and JHN 2:14) it is important to indicate this distinction, so as not to leave the impression that sacrificial animals were actually being sold inside the central sanctuary.

ἱεροσυλέω

ἱεροσυλέω (G2416)

verb | ἱερατεύω + συλάω

57.241 · Possess, Transfer, Exchange · Steal, Rob to rob temples to take by force or stealth objects from a temple It is also possible to interpret ἱεροσυλέω in ROM 2:22 as meaning ‘to commit sacrilege,’ in the sense of doing harm or damage to sacred objects in temples (see 53.104).

ROM 2:22

53.104 · Religious Activities · Sacrilege

to commit sacrilege, to desecrate to commit sacrilege by doing harm or damage to sacred objects in temples In biblical times the damaging of valuable objects in a temple was more than simply a criminal act, since it involved a serious breach of respect for supernatural beings. Accordingly, doing harm to sacred objects in a temple would be regarded as a particularly godless deed. For another interpretation of ἱεροσυλέω in ROM 2:22, see 57.241.

ἱερουργέω

ἱερουργέω

ἱερουργέω (G2418)

verb | ἱερατεύω + ἐργάζομαι

53.85 · Religious Activities · Roles and Functions

to serve as a priest, to be a priest to serve as a priest in the performance of religious rites and duties In contrast with the prophet who speaks to people on behalf of God, the priest is often defined as one who represents the people before God. In reality, however, the priest is one who is primarily engaged in religious ritual and ceremony in contrast with the prophet, whose primary activity is involved in proclaiming a message. In societies in which there is no organized priesthood and where there are only medicine men or shamans, it has often been possible to translate ἱερουργέω and ἱερατεύω as simply ‘to be God’s shaman.’ Whether such an expression can be used depends very largely upon the connotations associated with shamanism.

ἱκανός

ἱκανός (G2425) — ἱκανόν

adjc. | -ή, -όν | ἱκανόω

78.50 · Degree · Completely, Enough [Completive Degree]

enough, sufficient a degree which is sufficient¹ In some languages one can express the concept of sufficiency in 2CO 2:6 by introducing a negative, for example, ‘it is not necessary to punish such a person more.’ For another interpretation of ικανός in 2CO 2:6, see 78.14.

2CO 2:6

78.14 · Degree · Much, Little [Positive-Negative Degree]

great, intense, bright (in relationship to light) a relatively high point on a scale of extent It is also possible to understand ικανός in 2CO 2:6 as ‘sufficiency’ (see 78.50).

57.169 · Possess, Transfer, Exchange · Pay, Price, Cost

Collocation: ικανόν

bond, bail, the amount of money required for release the amount of money required to release someone who has been held in custody It may be necessary in a number of languages to be very specific about the meaning of ικανόν, for example, ‘the amount of money which had to be paid in order for someone to be released from arrest.’

ACT 17:9

¹ Compare ικανός[b] meaning a relatively high point on a scale of extent (78.14) and also ικανός[e] (59.2) and ικανός[f] (59.12) referring to quantity. ² ACT 22:6 ικανός as an expression of degree also occurs with the meaning of ‘enough’ (see 78.50), but the meaning of ‘enough’ or ‘sufficient’ would not be appropriate in ACT 22:6.

strap, thong leather strap or thong (used in binding sandals or shoes and as thongs in a whip) In a number of languages ἱμάς[a] may be translated as ‘leather string’ or ‘strip of leather.’ In JHN 1:27 the term may be absorbed within the total expression, for example, worthy to untie his sandals (implying the untying of the straps with which the sandals were bound).

In ACT 22:25 the clause ὥς δὲ προέτειναν αὐτὸν τοῖς ἱμάσιν may be interpreted as ‘they tied him up with thongs’ or as ‘they tied him up for whipping,’ in which case ἱμάσιν would refer to an event, not to an object (see 19.9).

¹ ἰνα[a] and ὅπως[b] seem to have similar meanings and in some contexts appear to be substituted one for the other for stylistic purposes. It is, of course, possible that even in the meaning of purpose ὅπως[b] suggests something of the manner or way in which the purpose is to be realized, but it is impossible on the basis of existing contexts to make a clear distinction between ἰνα[a] and ὅπως[b] when they serve as markers of purpose.

² In a number of instances, a marker of direct discourse is not represented in translation, particularly if what is indirect discourse in the Greek text is rendered as direct discourse.

However, in most languages it is inappropriate to speak of ‘rust’ as occurring with gold and silver. If there is no satisfactory term to indicate the deterioration in gold and silver resulting in extreme tarnish, it may be possible to translate JAS 5:3 as ‘your gold and silver will be ruined and this will serve as a witness against you.’

horse large domesticated solid-hoofed quadruped; Equus caballus; stockily built in comparison to today's horses, with shorter heads and thicker necks; about 122–142 cm tall, and 2.1 m long; coat varies from dark to pale brown; eats plants; used in battle, both to ride and for pulling chariots; symbolic of military might; associated with the sun, which was said to ride across the sky in a chariot Since horses are widely distributed in the world (at least knowledge about them is widespread), it is rarely difficult to obtain a satisfactory term. In some instances, however, expressions designating horses may seem rather strange. For example, in Sediq, a language spoken in Taiwan, a horse is literally 'a soldier's cow.'

rainbow or halo a circular or semicircular band of light, whether colored or not¹ In REV 4:3 and REV 10:1 (the only occurrences of ἵρις in the NT) the reference may be either to a rainbow or to a halo. The meaning of 'rainbow' may be expressed in some languages as 'a bow of light' or 'a curve of light' or even 'a ribbon of light.' The meaning of 'halo' is usually expressed as 'a circle of light' or 'a wreath of light' or 'a band of light encircling,' followed by the object which the band of light encircles.

REV 4:3 · REV 10:1

¹ It would also be possible to classify ἵρις rainbow or halo as being an event rather than an object, but in view of the relatively fixed Gestalt of this phenomenon, it is probably more satisfactory from the standpoint of an emic classification to regard ἵρις as an object.

31.7 · (ἵσταμαι[g]) · Hold a View, Believe, Trust · Have an Opinion, Hold a View

Collocation: ἵσταμαι ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ

to keep on being of an opinion, to remain with an opinion, to continue in one's views (an idiom, literally: to stand at the heart) to continue to have an opinion

¹ MAT 26:15 It is possible to interpret ἵστημι in MAT 26:15 as meaning only 'to offer,' but in view of the statement in MAT 27:3 (see 57.157) it is evident that the money was actually paid rather than merely offered, though the actual payment could have occurred after the betrayal. ² ἵσταμαι[a] and στήκω[a] would seem to differ only in terms of linguistic level or register, since στήκω was a new formation and probably somewhat more colloquial.

ιστορέω

ιστορέω

ιστορέω (G2477)

verb

34.52 · Association · Visit to visit and get information to visit, with the purpose of obtaining information¹ In rendering 'to get information from him' it may be more satisfactory to say 'to learn something from him' or 'to have him tell me what I needed to know.'

GAL 1:18

¹ ιστορέω can perhaps best be interpreted as combining two different domains: (1) the domain of Association (34) involving visiting and (2) the domain of Communication (33) involving the soliciting of information. This is a typical example of a meaning which overlaps two domains.

ἰσχύς (G2479)

noun, f. | -ύος | ἰσχύω

74.8 · Able, Capable capability, strength exceptional capability, with the probable implication of personal potential In a number of languages the expression ‘to love the Lord with one’s strength,’ in the sense of physical strength, is meaningless, and therefore it may be necessary to translate ‘love the Lord your God as completely as you can.’ It is important to note that in a passage such as MRK 12:30 the terms in the series καρδιάψυχήδιάνοια, and ἰσχύς do not refer to completely different parts or aspects of human personality; rather, the four are combined to emphasize the totality of the individual. In some languages the equivalent way of expressing this comprehensive aspect of personality is ‘to love him completely with all you feel and all you think.’

¹ Note that ἰσχύω[a] may occur without a verb complement, thus making possible a translation such as to be able to do or to be able to prevail as in REV 12:8 (καὶ οὐκ ἴσχυσεν and he was not able to prevail). In some languages, however, it may be better to render this expression in REV 12:8 as he was defeated.

ἴσως (G2481)

advb. | ἴσος

71.11 · Mode · Probable, Improbable

probably, likely pertaining to an event having a high degree of probability In view of the misjudgment implied in LUK 20:13, a number of translators have rendered ἴσως as simply ‘perhaps’ or ‘maybe,’ though the Greek term ἴσως would certainly imply a considerably higher degree of hope for a successful outcome.

ἰχθύς (G2486)

noun, m. | -ύς | ἰχθύδιον

4.59 · Animals · Fishes and Other Sea Creatures

sea creature, fish any creature living in the sea Though all languages have terms to designate at least certain kinds of fish, there are frequently important distinctions between varieties. In a number of instances distinctions are made between fish which have scales and those which do not (an important distinction in the OT, since it constituted the basis for distinguishing between ‘clean’ or ‘unclean’ varieties). In other languages the distinction may be made between fresh water and salt water fish, while in still other languages a clear distinction is made between edible and inedible fish.

Some languages also distinguish between fish which are still alive in the water and those which have been caught and are in various stages of preparation for being eaten. In MAT 7:10 ἰχθύϛ may refer to a piece of fish ready to be eaten.
