τάλαντον (G5007)

noun, n. | -ου | τάλαντιαῖος

6.82 · Artifacts · Money and Monetary Units

talent a Greek monetary unit (also a unit of weight) with a value which fluctuated, depending upon the particular monetary system which prevailed at a particular period of time (a silver talent was worth approximately six thousand denarii with gold talents worth at least thirty times that much) In MAT 25:15 what is important is the relative number of talents or sums of money. In a number of translations the respective amounts are stated in terms of local currency. For example, in English one may speak of five thousand dollars as equivalent to five talents, though in terms of buying power, five talents would be worth much more than five thousand dollars. What is important, however, in this story is not the precise sums of money but the relative amount which was given to the different servants.

The ‘ten thousand talents’ referred to in MAT 18:24 would be equivalent to millions of denarii. The sum in this parable is perhaps greatly exaggerated, precisely in order to emphasize the vast differences between the two debts. It is also true, of course, that in ancient times persons with extensive mercantile businesses sometimes became slaves as a result of defeat in war, and they were purchased by business syndicates together with their business enterprises, which they would continue to manage.

city wall a particularly strong permanent wall, primarily the wall built around a city for its protection In a number of languages a translator must make a clear distinction between a wall of a house and a city wall. The wall of a house may be called ‘a side of a house’ and an inner wall ‘a partition in a house,’ while a city wall is often related to terms such as ‘barricade’ or ‘fence.’ Hence, a city wall may be called ‘a fortified fence around a city.’

to bear, to give birth to give birth to a child¹ All languages have expressions for human birth, though these are frequently in idiomatic forms, for example, ‘to drop a child’ or ‘to cause a baby to pass between the legs.’ A number of languages have a variety of terms referring to giving birth, and some of these may involve unfortunate connotations. One must therefore be careful about the selection of appropriate expressions.

persons of, people of (a figurative extension of meaning of τέκνον[a] ‘child,’ 10.36) inhabitants of a particular place Only rarely can one preserve the figurative significance of τέκνον[c] as a designation of the inhabitants of an area. Readers are too likely to understand such a reference as applicable only to children who live in a particular place. Even the use of a simile does not assist appreciably, since it would be interpreted as likening the inhabitants of an area to children, probably in the sense of their being immature or incapable. For example, the expression the people of Jerusalem like children would probably lead to serious misunderstanding.

See also 9.4 and 12.15 In a number of languages it is difficult to speak of ‘light’ in the metaphorical sense of the truth that comes from God. Such truth is not to be equated with knowledge, but with the principles and practices of right moral behavior. Because of these difficulties in speaking of ‘truth’ as ‘light,’ a number of translators have preferred to use the expression ‘people of God’ for the phrases υἱοὶ τοῦ φωτός, υἱοὶ τῆς ἡμέρας, and τέκνα φωτός. In some instances, however, it is possible to employ ‘light,’ if this is described as ‘light that comes from God’ or even ‘the true light from God.’

67.66 · Time · A Point of Time with Reference to Duration of Time: Beginning, End

end a point of time marking the end of a duration There are serious problems involved in rendering τέλος[a] in MAT 24:14 and in similar contexts. In a number of languages one simply cannot say ‘the end will come’; rather, it may be necessary to say ‘that is the finish’ or ‘everything is finished.’ In the context of MAT 24:14, however, it may be best to translate ‘God will finish everything.’ The phrase εἰς τέλος in 1TH 2:16 may also be understood as an idiomatic expression involving a degree of completeness (see 78.47).

78.47 · Degree · Completely, Enough [Completive Degree]

Collocation: εἰς τέλος

completely, totally, entirely, wholly a degree of completeness, with the possible implication of purpose or result It is also possible to understand the phrase ἕως τέλους in the temporal sense of ‘to the end’ (see 67.66).

It is also possible to understand τέλος in the expression εἰς τέλος in 1TH 2:16 as a temporal expression, with εἰς (67.117) as a marker of an extent of time, so that this passage may be rendered as ‘and in the end wrath has come down on them’ or ‘and wrath has at last come down on them’ (see 67.66). In this context ὀργή may very well be translated as ‘punishment’ (38.10), and in many languages it is necessary to indicate the agent of such punishment. The same ambiguity with εἰς τέλος occurs in JHN 13:1 in the clause εἰς τέλος ἠγάπησεν αὐτούς, meaning ‘he loved them completely’ or ‘he loved them to the end’ (see 67.119).

57.179 · Possess, Transfer, Exchange · Tax, Tribute

duty, tax, revenue payments customarily due a governmental authority The term τέλος[e] differs from κῆνσος (57.180) in being somewhat more generic in meaning. In certain contexts τέλος[e] may refer to various kinds of direct taxes, customs duties, and tribute money, but in contexts such as MAT 17:25 in which κῆνσος also occurs, τέλος probably refers primarily to customs duties, while κῆνσος refers to a direct poll tax upon all adult males.

tax collector, revenue officer (derivative of τελέω[e] ‘to pay taxes,’ 57.178) one who collects taxes for the government Since Jews who farmed the taxes for the Romans (that is to say, who paid Roman authorities for the privilege of collecting taxes) were considered traitors to their own people, the term τελώνης has strongly negative connotations in the NT. In any translation of the Gospels it may be especially important to have an adequate marginal note designed to explain the basis for the hostility which many people had toward tax collectors.

revenue office, tax office (derivative of τελέω[e] ‘to pay taxes,’ 57.178) a place where taxes or revenue was collected from those entering a town to sell produce In the ancient world taxes were primarily of two types: (1) a head tax on each individual (which was relatively small) and (2) revenue or tribute paid for goods and produce brought into an area for sale. The latter was essentially a kind of ‘sales tax,’ but paid by the seller who obviously increased the prices of goods accordingly.

animal, quadruped any four-footed animal, either wild or domesticated A high percentage of languages appear to have no generic term to identify all kinds of quadrupeds whether wild or domesticated. Rather, they tend to make quite clear distinctions between wild and domesticated animals, and therefore it may be necessary to indicate both types in those contexts where the reference is to both wild as well as domesticated animals. For example, one may sometimes speak of ‘animals of the grass and animals of the forest’ or ‘animals of the barn and animals of the mountains.’

In ACT 10:12 the reference is primarily to wild animals, since for the most part wild animals would be those designated as unclean. However, swine were also regarded as unclean, and they were domesticated.

17.19 · Stances and Events Related to Stances · Kneel

Collocation: τίθημι τὰ γόνατα

to kneel down, to kneel (an idiom, literally: to place the knees, a Latinism) to kneel down before, with the implication of an act of reverence or of supplication In a number of cultures, kneeling does not imply either reverence or an act of supplication. In some instances translators have used a functional substitute involving a similar type of stance, namely, 'to bow low before,' but it may be necessary to use a more or less literal description of 'kneeling before' and then to place in a marginal note an indication of the implications of such an act.

23.113 · Physiological Processes and States · Live, Die

to die voluntarily, to die willingly (an idiom, literally: to lay down one's life) to die, with the implication of voluntary or willing action Though in English the phrases 'to lay down one's life' or 'to give one's life' do suggest a voluntary dying, a literal rendering of such expressions in other languages would not necessarily imply the same. It may therefore be necessary to use such expressions as 'to die willingly' or 'to die without resisting.' In some languages 'willingly' is expressed primarily as a negation of objecting, for example, 'I will not object to dying.'

1 In this subdomain τίθημι[a] is by far the most generic expression. 2 JHN 13:4 This seemingly unusual use of τίθημι with τὰ ἱμάτια in JHN 13:4 parallels the use of λαμβάνω in the sense of 'putting on a garment' in JHN 13:12 (see 49.10). 3 Any meaning involving 'to cause to be' implies some change in state, and therefore one could classify these meanings under Subdomain B Change of State in Domain 13 Be, Become, Exist, Happen. However, the focus seems to be primarily upon the changed state rather than upon the process of moving from one state to another. The fact that a change of state has taken place seems to be semantically incidental.

verb | fut. τέξομαι · aor. ἔτεκον · inf. τεκεῖν · aor.pass. ἐτέχθην · ptc. τεχθεῖς | ἀρχιτέκτων · ἄτεκνος · ὁμότεχνος · πρωτοτόκια · πρωτότοκος · τεκνίον · τεκνογονέω · τεκνογονία · τέκνον · τεκνοτροφέω · τέκτων · τόκος · φιλότεκνος

23.52 · Physiological Processes and States · Birth, Procreation

to bear, to give birth to give birth to a child¹ All languages have expressions for human birth, though these are frequently in idiomatic forms, for example, 'to drop a child' or 'to cause a baby to pass between the legs.' A number of languages have a variety of terms referring to giving birth, and some of these may involve unfortunate connotations. One must therefore be careful about the selection of appropriate expressions.

65.1 · Value · Valuable, Lacking in Value

worth, value the worth or merit of some object, event, or state In some languages the equivalent of ‘value’ is almost always in terms of ‘importance.’ This is particularly true if one is speaking of objects which are normally not bought and sold. Accordingly, one may render this particular expression in 1CO 12:23 as ‘those parts of the body which we think of as not being so important, to these we grant particular importance’ or ‘... we consider as being very important.’

It is also possible to interpret τιμή in 1CO 12:23 as a degree of honor or appreciation (see τιμή[a], 87.4).

57.161 · Possess, Transfer, Exchange · Pay, Price, Cost

amount, price, cost the amount of money or property regarded as representing the value or price of something It would be wrong to assume that τιμή in 1CO 7:23 necessarily means ‘a high price.’ The notion ‘high’ comes from the contextual reference to the death of Christ. In 1CO 7:23, however, the implication is that a price was set and that the payment has been made. If the passive expression in 1CO 7:23 must be made active, one may translate as ‘Christ bought you with a price’ or ‘Christ paid for you.’

why? for what reason? an interrogative reference to reason The expression τί ἐμοὶ καὶ σοί (literally ‘what for me and you?’) in JHN 2:4 is an adage meaning ‘for what reason are you saying or doing this to me?’ In some languages it may be preferable to translate JHN 2:4 as ‘why do you ask me this?’ In MRK 1:24 one may translate ‘what do you want with us?’

sandbar, reef a bar or reef produced in an area where two currents meet It is possible to understand τόπος διθάλασσος in ACT 27:41 as a place of crosscurrents; see 14.32. In some languages it may be necessary to construct a descriptive equivalent for ‘sandbank,’ for example, ‘a hill of sand just beneath the surface of the water’ or ‘a ridge of sand hidden by the water.’

ACT 27:41

1 It is possible that in the case of such meanings as τόπος[f] (11.59), πόλις[c] (11.61), κώμη[b] (11.62), and χώρα[e] (11.64) one should count on certain more or less automatic semantic rules by which the meaning of inhabitants could be derived by metonymy from expressions of place. Since, however, such metonymic developments are far from universal, the distinct meanings are listed here as a practical guide to translators. The same type of problem occurs with Ιερουσόλυμα ‘Jerusalem,’ Ἰουδαία ‘Judea,’ and περίχωρος ‘region’ in MAT 3:5.

Collocation: διακονέω τραπέζαις

to handle finances (an idiom, literally: to serve tables) to be responsible for financial aspects of an enterprise It is also possible to interpret the phrase διακονέω τραπέζαις not as an idiom but simply as 'to wait on tables, to serve meals' (see 23.26 and 46.13), but even so the context relates to caring for needs.

neck τράχηλος also occurs in the NT in certain idiomatic expressions, for example, ‘to fall on the neck of someone’ (LUK 15:20 and ACT 20:37) in the sense of ‘to embrace’ (34.64), and ‘to put down their necks’ (ROM 16:4) meaning ‘to risk their lives’ (21.8). It is rare indeed that one can translate such idioms literally, since ‘to fall on the neck of someone’ may readily suggest a murderous attack, and ‘to risk one’s neck’ may be simply meaningless, since the custom of beheading as a means of execution may be relatively unknown.

to fear, to have awesome respect for (a figurative extension of meaning of τρέμω[a] ‘to tremble,’ 16.6) to be so afraid as to tremble, often with the implication of awe¹ For another interpretation of τρέμω in 2PE 2:10, see 87.14.

87.14 · Status · Honor or Respect in Relation to Status to fear, to show great reverence for, to show great respect for to have such awe or respect for a person as to involve a measure of fear In a number of languages there are serious problems involved in speaking of ‘fearing God,’ for this might imply merely ‘to be scared of God’ as though God were some kind of bogeyman. If there is a term with the meaning of ‘awe’ (perhaps in a phrase such as ‘to stand in awe of’), this may be an adequate equivalent. In some instances awe is expressed idiomatically as ‘to stand with one’s heart in one’s throat’ or ‘to be in someone’s presence with one’s heart beating fast.’

For another interpretation of τρέμω in 2PE 2:10, see 25.259.

2PE 2:10

1 It is possible to regard τρέμω[b] (25.259) and φρίσσω (25.260) as belonging simultaneously to two quite distinct semantic domains, the one being physiological, that is to say, a type of uncontrolled physical response because of fear or great awe, and a psychological experience of fear or terror. Since, however, it is the latter which gives rise to the former, one would seem to be more justified in treating these meanings as matters of emotive responses rather than as physiological events.

LUK 4:16

1 It is possible that ἐκτρέφω[a] is somewhat more emphatic in meaning than τρέφω[a], but this cannot be determined from existing contexts. 2 There may very well be subtle differences of meaning in the series in 35.51, but there is no direct contextual evidence to support significant distinctions in meaning.

1 The terms τρῆμα, τρύπημα, and τρυμαλία actually belong theoretically to a domain of openings, holes, and apertures, but since these terms in the NT are associated so closely with a needle, it seems far more satisfactory to treat them together with ῥαφίς and βελόνη needle (6.215).

1 Though τὸ τρίτον functions in an adverbial sense, there seems to be no reason to set up a separate meaning of τρίτος as referring only to a temporal sequence. The interpretation of τρίτος in terms of time or space is a factor of the context. When objects are involved, ordinals simply mark position in a spacial sequence; when events are involved, ordinals simply mark position in a temporal sequence.

noun, f. | -ῆς | τρέφω

5.1 · Foods and Condiments · Food

food any kind of food or nourishment¹ Almost all languages have at least a few general terms for food, though these may be derived from verbal expressions meaning essentially ‘that which is eaten.’ In some instances a distinction may be made between ‘that which is chewed’ and ‘that which is drunk,’ and it may therefore be important in certain contexts to speak of food in general by a phrase meaning ‘that which is either chewed or drunk.’ If one fails to include both types of food, the reader might interpret a passage such as MAT 6:11 as requesting only solid foods.

In the place of a general term or phrase such as ‘that which is eaten’ or ‘that which is consumed,’ some languages generalize the meaning of a particular term. For example, in certain parts of the Orient the term meaning specifically ‘rice’ also refers to ‘food’ in general. In fact, some persons will declare, ‘I have not eaten!’ if they have not had rice as part of a meal. A similar type of meaning has developed in English with respect to ‘bread.’ For example, in rendering LUK 4:4 (οὐκ ἐπ’ ἄρτῳ μόνῳ ζήσεται ὁ ἄνθρωπος ‘man shall not live by bread alone’) it would be wrong to employ a strictly literal rendering, since this might mean simply that people should not live on a diet consisting solely of bread. The meaning of LUK 4:4 is, of course, ‘to live means more than merely eating.’

MAT 3:4 · MAT 6:25 · MAT 10:102 · MAT 24:45 · LUK 12:23 · JHN 4:8 · ACT 2:46 · ACT 9:19 · ACT 14:17 · ACT 27:33 · ACT 27:34 · ACT 27:36 · ACT 27:38 · HEB 5:12 · HEB 5:14 · JAS 2:15

1 There are no doubt certain subtle differences of meaning in the various terms listed here as meaning ‘food,’ but it is impossible to determine such distinctions in meaning from NT contexts. Perhaps τροφή and διατροφή are somewhat more generic in meaning and may suggest a greater emphasis upon nourishment (see footnote b). At the same time, βρώσις[c] and βρώμα[a] may imply solid substantive food, but it is difficult, if not impossible, to argue for such subtle connotative distinctions in meanings which are essentially generic. 2 MAT 10:10 It is possible that τροφή and διατροφή focus primarily upon the meaning of food as nourishment, and in MAT 10:10 and 1TI 6:8 it would be perfectly appropriate to use a translation meaning ‘nourishment’ rather than merely ‘food.’

τρύβλιον (G5165)

noun, n. | -ου

6.136 · Artifacts · Containers

bowl, dish a relatively deep concave dish used for holding or cooking food or liquids; usually made of clay, but also metals In the two NT occurrences (MAT 26:23; MRK 14:20) τρύβλιον can be understood as a part of an idiom (literally ‘to dip one’s hands into the bowl with someone’) meaning ‘to share a meal with someone.’ If, however, the idiom is to be translated literally (and this is normally the case), there are certain difficulties involved, since a literal rendering of ‘to dip one’s hand into a bowl’ might mean literally putting one’s fingers or hand into a bowl rather than dipping in food which one holds in the hand. An idiomatic interpretation of ‘sharing a meal with someone’ or ‘eating together with’ may be preferable. But if one does translate the idiom somewhat literally, it is important in some languages to render this phrase as ‘to dip food into a bowl together with someone’ or ‘to jointly dip food into sauce.’

τρυγών

τρυγών (G5167)

noun, f. | -όνος

4.44 · Animals · Birds

dove, pigeon Asiatic Rock dove: bird with a blue-gray color with a pinkish sheen to the neck feathers and a black tip on its tail; lives in large colonies and eats mainly seeds; courts, mates, and has nests several times a year; nests on rock ledges; Columba via; used as food and for sacrifices; regarded as swift, docile, and innocent Though in English a relatively clear distinction is made between ‘doves’ (which have pointed tails) and ‘pigeons’ (which have square off tails), there seems to be no such distinction in the use of περιστέρα and τρυγών in the Greek of the New Testament.

There are, however, certain problems involved in the connotations of terms relating to pigeons or doves. According to ancient zoology, the dove was thought to have no bile, and consequently, therefore, to be a very peaceful and clean bird. It thus became a symbol of Christian virtue and of gentleness (as in MAT 10:16). In reality, however, doves and pigeons are quite aggressive, and a group of pigeons are frequently known to peck an injured bird to death. Therefore, in some societies pigeons or doves are not regarded as gentle or peaceful, but rather as wicked and harmful. In fact, in some cultures doves are thought to be symbols of death and of evil. Under such circumstances it is important, therefore, to have some marginal note so as to indicate clearly the symbolic significance of such birds in biblical contexts.

¹ The terms τρήμα, τρύπημα, and τρυμαλιά actually belong theoretically to a domain of openings, holes, and apertures, but since these terms in the NT are associated so closely with a needle, it seems far more satisfactory to treat them together with ραφίς and βελόνη needle (6.215).

2CO 4:4

32.25 · Understand · Capacity for Understanding

Collocation: τυφλώ τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς

to cause to not understand, to make unable to comprehend (an idiom, literally: to blind the eyes) to cause someone to no longer have the capacity for understanding Though in some languages there is a close relationship between the eyes and comprehension, in many languages it is simply impossible to use the idiom 'to blind the eyes' in speaking of 'causing someone not to understand.' The problem becomes particularly difficult in speaking of 'darkness blinding the eyes' as in 1JN 2:11. People can understand how 'bright light would blind the eyes,' but it would be strange indeed to think of 'darkness' having such an effect. In the context of 1JN 2:11, the darkness is, of course, not literal darkness but a state of sinfulness. Therefore, in some languages it may be necessary to translate 'their sinfulness has made it impossible for them to understand' or 'because they sin, they cannot understand.'

For example, in English terms such as squall and tornado indicate violent but short periods of blowing, while hurricane or typhoon indicates a storm which takes a much longer period of time to pass.
